Death of I. T. Burr.

Mr. Isaac Tucker Burr, one of the best known and widely respected men in the city died at his home on Park street Wednesday evening at 9:30 o'clock from an attack of angina pectoris following an illness of about two weeks.

Mr. Burr was born at Leicester, Mass., Aug. 15, 1828, his parents being Heman M. and Nellie (Tucker) Burr.

He received a common school education and at the age of sixteen entered the dry goods business in Boston. He remained in this business until 1867. From 1874 to 1894 Mr. Burr was president of the National Bank of North America.

In 1867 he retired and devoted himself to outside interests. He was at one time director in over 50 companies, and had large holdings in concerns with which he was not publicly identified. In the West he was most prominent in connection with the Atchinson, Topeka and Santa Fe and Mexican Central railroads, and a large owner in the San Diego Land Company of Southern California, and in the East in the formation of the West End Street Railway and the West End land companies. He was for a long time president of the Edwards Manufacturing Company, and director in the Bates and Arlington mills. He had in earlier years large foreign shipping interests, in connection with George C. Lord and Co. He was at one time a director in the Mexican Central railroad and the American Loan and Trust Company.

Mr. Burr was always deeply interested in the town and city of Newton and was its representative to the General Court in 1875 and 1876. He was one of the three original trustees of the Newton Free Library who had charge of the construction of the present building and was treasurer of some of its special funds.

Mr. Burr attended the Channing Church, and was president of the Hunnewell Club in 1900 and 1901.

Mr. Burr is survived by a widow, and seven children, Mrs. Dr. John Farlow of Boston, Hon. Heman M. Burr of Newton, Isaac T. Burr Jr. of Milton, Mrs. Harry Hardon and Winthrop Burr of New York, Bertha, who resides abroad and Allston Burr of Chestnut Hill.

The funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 from his late residence, 142 Park street.

A Summer's Outing

A "Graphic" Man's Experiences in Europe

Rome, July 27th, 1904.

Dear Graphic: Much to the regret of all the visit to Venice was over and at noon on Monday we were taken in gondolas to the railroad station where the train was waiting to transport us to Florence. As there were about 150 members the party nearly filled all the carriages, and its size must have impressed the officials strongly. The idea of University Travel, as started some years ago by Professor Powers, has taken a strong hold on the public and is now getting to be a movement of considerable prominence. In a way it is a travelling school as the various leaders are all teachers or University men and women and lecture, as their respective parties visit the places of interest, in art, science, and history throughout Europe.

Beside Prof. and Mrs. H. H. Powers, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Sawin and Mr. Harry W. Mason of Newton and Miss Bertha O'Connor of Newton Highlands, whom I have mentioned in a previous letter, others from the Garden City are Miss Bertha V. Drew, Miss Louise M. Powl, Mr. Philip Powers and Miss Constance Wilder of Newton, Mr. Charles E. Gibson, Miss Helen Gibson and Mr. Clifford Mead of West Newton, Miss Carrie Ward and Miss Florence Ward of Newton Centre, Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Meserve of Newtonville and Mr. and Mrs. Bixby of Newton Highlands.

The day was hot and our compartments uncomfortable but in the evening it became somewhat cooler. We went by the station at Padua, the famous university town, took supper at Bologna, and went through 47 tunnels on our way across the Apennines. In Florence we were guests at the Hotel de Londres, close by the Victor Emanuel statue, the cathedral and the museum.

Florence was formerly the capital of the Grand Duchy of Tuscany, is the seat of an archbishop and is one of the most attractive cities in Italy. It is situated on the river Arno and the greater part of the city is located on the right bank. Our first visit was to the Baptistery, an octagonal shaped building where all children born in Florence are baptised. The three celebrated bronze doors were added in the 14th and 15th centuries. The one on the south is the oldest, was completed by Andrea Pisano in 1336 and the reliefs comprise scenes from the life of John the Baptist. The north door was executed by Lorenzo Ghiberti in 1403-24 and gives scenes from the life of Christ.

The third door, facing the cathedral was also the work of Ghiberti and is considered such a marvel of art that Michael Angelo said that it was fit to be the gate into Paradise. The subjects are the Creation and Expulsion from Paradise, The Queen of Sheba, Cain slaying his brother and others. We spent an hour at the Cathedral Museum where there is an interesting collection of busts, fragments and reliefs and the remainder of the morning at the Academy of Arts. There are many fine paintings by well known artists and in the long corridor stands the celebrated statue of David by Michael Angelo shaped by the youthful artist in 1501 to 1504 from a gigantic block of marble which had been abandoned as spoiled. No plastic work of Angelo earned such a harvest of praise among his contemporaries as this figure and one can spend some time in studying the fine lines and curves of the body.

The following morning was spent at the church of Santa Maria Novella which is under the control of the Dominican monks, a preaching order, and the patron saints are Mary the Virgin and John the Baptist. The Strozzi and Rucellai families attended here and there are many specimens of the great masters on the walls. The Della Robbia bas-reliefs are seen here and many of the prominent families are buried within the walls. The sun is a tyrant in the southern countries and the problem of lighting church interiors is much more difficult to solve than it is in the north where windows are long and wide and flying buttresses make safety a positive thing. The windows are high in the walls and there is very little opportunity for stained glass or ornamental effects.

On our way back to our hotel we enjoyed a walk through the streets of old Florence, narrow and dirty in the old part, full of beggars, market wagons and people comprising all sorts and conditions of trade and society. The carts are drawn by horses or burros attached by leather straps to a collar around the body near the shoulders. The streets are sprinkled by men with ordinary watering cans and a small cart holding a supply.

The shops are rather odd looking and during the heated time, in the middle of the day appear to be closed. The Ponte Vecchio is one of the oldest bridges and is said to have existed as far back as the Roman period. It spans the Arno and is in the midst of the shopping district. Close by is the Uffizi palace and museum, originating with the Medici collection, and containing the portraits of many of the famous artists such as Rubens, Raphael, Lippi, Titian, Rembrandt, Watts, Leighton and Alma Tedema. In the Tribuna are five celebrated marble sculptures; the Satyr, the Wrestlers, the Medici Venus, the Grinder and the Apollino.

On our return for lunch we passed the Palazzo Vecchio, a castle like building originally the headquarters of the trade guilds who at one time controlled the government, the tower and square where Savonarola was confined and burned at the stake and the house which stands on the spot where Dante was born. Within the past week I have talked with Miss Tolman of West Newton, Miss Eunice Simpson, Miss Susie Whiting and Miss Alice Webber of Newton. This makes about thirty people from home that I have seen since my arrival on this side of the Atlantic.

The Strozzi palace, opposite the hotel, is a fine example of the early Florentine building with its 25 feet of solid wall, massive and stern in appearance, and the two floors with heavy cased windows above. The Church of Santa Croce, a Franciscan edifice, is in the square where the statue of Dante is located, and its interior gives the general effect of emptiness and barrenness. It is sometimes called the Westminster of Florence on account of the many noted men who are buried here or who have monuments erected to their memory. Among them are Galileo, Michael Angelo, Dante, Leonardo Bruni, Rossini and Cherubini. This church contains the marble pulpit, considered the most beautiful in Italy, and having bas-reliefs of the life of St. Francis along its sides. There are also frescoes by Giotto and by Taddeo Gaddi and terra cotta reliefs by pupils of the school of Della Robbia.

A pleasant ride in the electric cars was to the Piazzale Michelangiolo, where is a fine bronze copy of David and where an extensive view is had of the city below. In the church of San Miniato is the crucifix which is said to have nodded approvingly to Saint Giovanni Gualberto when he forgave the murderer of his brother and a unique crypt below the choir.

One evening we had a most delightful reception at the hotel given by Prof. Powers and the various leaders and which was well attended by the members. Visits were made during our stay to the cathedral or Duomo, the Campanile adjoining, the Church of San Lorenzo and its handsome new Sacristy, containing Michael Angelo's world famed statues of Day and Night and Evening and Dawn, and to the Buonarroti house where the great artist and sculptor lived. We also spent a morning at the beautiful Pitti Palace, the home of the King when he is in Florence. In the upper floor of the left wing is the famous picture gallery containing about 500 works of art hung on the walls and painted on the ceilings. The handsome marble topped tables are in evidence everywhere, some of them inlaid in most exquisite patterns, and also a collection of miniature portraits.

Adjoining the Church of San Marco is the monastery where Savonarola the powerful preacher once lived, and many other churches and points of interest were seen before we left. I hope to visit Florence again sometime, to walk along the streets where Dante, the great ruler and writer once moved, where the silver tongued monk drew the people to him by his wonderful eloquence, where Michael Angelo executed some of his masterpieces and where the glory of Italian art was upheld by such men as Giotto, Raphael, Andrea del Sarto, Ghiberti and Botticelli. There is not room to write of many other places visited but I cannot close without a word regarding Pisa where an afternoon was spent on the way to Rome.

A short ride from the station brought us to the group of buildings which constitute the principal points of interest and are located in the Piazza del Santo. The cathedral is an imposing structure of white marble ornamented with black and colored bands and has an interior in keeping with the exterior. There are many fine frescoes by the old masters and the large iron chandelier which gave Galileo the idea of a pendulum, one day while it was swinging was examined with interest by all. Our party climbed the Campanile or clock tower and as its 179 feet is 13 feet out of the perpendicular, experienced a most peculiar sensation. The view from the top is very fine. The Campo Santo or burial ground arcades has some fine frescoes and the dead rest in holy ground as the archbishop had 53 ship loads of earth brought from Mt. Calvary. A half hour was spent in the Baptistery where there are fine marble carvings and a wonderful echo. Frank Dunlap Frisbie.

THE New England Conservatory of Music

GEORGE W. CHADWICK, Director

(FIFTY-SECOND YEAR)

OPENS SEPTEMBER 15th

Students are received at any time during the School year for special work in any department or for full graduating courses. Lessons are given in private or in small classes, according to the wish or needs of the pupil.

The faculty consists of the foremost artists and educators of the present day. The facilities for study for rapid and thorough advancement are not to be found elsewhere, either at home or abroad.

The department of OPERA and ORCHESTRA furnish abundant opportunity for the public performance of advanced students. The frequent Conservatory concerts, recitals, lectures, etc., alone provide a liberal education which are free to all students.

Office open for Registration Sept. 8th.

The year book will be sent on application.

Address, Huntington Ave., corner Gainsborough St., Boston, Mass.

Old Time Wheelman

The last Old Time Wheelmen's Meet of the season will be held at Bass Point, Nahant, on Sunday, Sept. 4th, under the auspices of the Clover Cycle Club of Lynn. This makes an ideal place of meeting as it is very accessible to reach by steamer from Boston or train to Lynn and then over by barge or boat from Lynn.

The roads are good for cyclists and the towns to the North of Boston will be well represented. Parties are now being formed at Lowell, Haverhill, Newburyport, Salem, as well as Chelsea, Boston, Malden, and Roslindale.

This being the last Meet of the season there is no doubt but what there will be a large turnout. Captains of the different clubs should call runs for this event, as the Clover Cycle Club of Lynn has had a prize cup donated by the Hotel and Restaurant proprietors of Nahant and the steamship Co., for the largest number of members of any club that may attend. The cup will be on exhibition at the Pope Building, 223 Columbus Ave., Boston, during the next week and the following week at Lynn.

There are good checking facilities and plenty of places where shore dinners can be had as well as bathing facilities.

Capt. A. D. Peck has called a run of the Mass. Bicycle Club for that day, besides Abbot Bassett and other of the League officials will be present.

MUSIC.

Mr. A. H. Handley of 23 Richardson street in this issue calls attention to the fact that he desires to "furnish music for all occasions."

During the past few years, while he has been absent from Newton, for Mr. Handley is an old Newton boy, he has met with much success in his chosen field of music and on the South Shore no festivity, be it lawn fete, musicale, concert, a private theatrical, club band concert, hop, german or dancing party, is considered complete unless Mr. Handley is furnishing the music and has given his opinion in regard to the program.

In addition to being a conductor of much originality and possessing the ability to get out of a music score all there is in it, Mr. Handley is a cornetist of recognized talent and is in much demand as a soloist. It is not doubted for a moment but what he will meet with much success in his sphere in Newton.

Little Bill's Luck.

It is not probable that superstition will ever receive its deathblow, but now and then it gets jugged a bit. Two cockneys met not long ago, says Good Words, in a London thoroughfare.

"I've just heard that your little Bill got run over," said one. "Ow did it happen?"

"I was picking up a 'orceshoe for luck," replied Little Bill's father.

Summer Series of Articles on Women's Clubs of Newton.

The Wednesday Club of Newton Centre.

In the fall of 1891 twelve ladies began together a study of the life and works of James Russell Lowell and the Wednesday Club of Newton Centre came into existence, meeting informally in the morning at the homes of its different members. Mrs. E. O. Silver was the inspiration of its early years, and under her able guidance we learned to know and love our greatest New England poet as we had never known or loved him before.

For three years this study continued then broadened to include mankind in general. We became interested in Sociology and added to the educational and social purposes of our club the philanthropic one of aiding as might be practical in charitable work. Ever since we have had a threefold aim in view. Meantime the club membership had increased to twenty, which number has been the limit and always full.

Civil Government followed a year of social problems, then "My Favorite Book" was discussed through the meetings of a year. Each morning bringing an analysis and comments on some well loved author. The evening meeting of that year was made memorable by meeting Mrs. Caroline Atwater Mason at the home of our president and listening to her charming paper on Dante Gabrielle Rossetti, while the room was filled with beautiful photographs of his paintings.

Two years in Holland and the succeeding year with Dutch and Flemish art left us strongly attached to the Low Countries. At one of our evening meetings we journeyed "Through Holland with a Black Stick" guided by Mr. Louis K. Harlow. On another the club in Dutch costume received its friends surrounded by pictures and curiosities from the quaint little kingdom.

Answering a need we all felt, the next two years were given to Musical History and Biography and furnished us with many delightful mornings when both instrument and voice added their inspiration to our study. One evening Mrs. C. L. Bird gave us a most interesting paper illustrated by musical numbers by Mrs. Loring Brooks.

The last of these years another feature, which has come to be a part of each year's program, was inaugurated, an afternoon meeting for the members alone, when we indulged in a light program, chiefly of games based upon our years' study. This Musical Afternoon at the home of Mrs. S. S. Widger and the original song for the occasion will long be remembered.

A love of the historical and romantic caused us to look to Scotland and two years were spent reviewing its history and characteristics, its picturesque scenery, its industries, schools and illustrious authors. Mrs. Wallace Stokes Irons' Songs of Scotland, many of which were delightfully sung, gave us our first Scotch evening. A miscellaneous program, in which a Scotch bagpipe was the chief feature, filled the second evening.

Last season we spent in Venice revelling in the beauty and warmth of color of the Queen of the Adriatic, seeking for the key to her wonderful existence, wandering through her walled ways and into her most glorious buildings, trying to understand something of her art, lingering upon the great names that are associated with hers. An evening in Venice, when tableaux of Venetian characters and an art gallery of Venetian scenery bringing us almost across the Atlantic, is the memory of that year.

From Venice we turn to Florence for the coming season, a subject so rich in material we can hardly hope to do it justice, yet trusting to learn the essentials of its gift and debt to the world.

The club meets regularly the first and third Wednesday mornings in each month from October to May. The courses of study have usually been arranged by the board of officers, and the plan has been a paper at each morning meeting by one of the ladies with such illustrations by music, or photographs or curios as she was able to provide. The first Wednesday evening in February for some years has been devoted to a reception of the husbands and a limited number of friends, where a more elaborate program has been arranged and we have been greatly favored by much outside talent.

Last season a visit to Mrs. Jack Gardner's Italian Palace in the Fenway seemed an appropriate addition to the club calendar and was much enjoyed.

Our presidents have been Mrs. E. O. Silver, Mrs. E. R. Benton, Mrs. F. E. Anderson, Mrs. Chase, Mrs. S. S. Widger, Mrs. A. B. Rice. The present officers are Mrs. A. B. Rice, president; Mrs. Henry Bailey, vice president; Mrs. W. Z. Ripley, secretary; Mrs. C. L. Smith, treasurer; Mrs. C. M. Goddard, member of the executive committee.

again the voices of his friends and his weatherbeaten face was constantly wrinkled with pleasure as he wandered through the crowd. Another with cane and crutch sat under the trees and evidently enjoyed the relief from the isolation of invalidism. The ladies in their crisp white dresses and shirt waists, and the young girls in their best bib and tucker, brought a dash of color to the constantly changing variety of the scene. The usual array of country urchins, with wide open mouths and strong ear drums, lined up as near as possible to the band, while their elders in Sunday clothes wandered about greeting old friends and meeting new ones. There was a quietness about their greetings to each other. It seemed as if they had gathered a little of the solidity of their native hills, and yet, one had the impression that their handshake was more than a perfunctory convention, and that their inquiries of the absent were straight from the heart. The people came in all kinds of conveyances, from the hayrick of the farmer to the bicycle wheel carriage of the summer visitor. The horses also were of all kinds and conditions, some prancing at the music of the band, while others stolidly plodded along, indifferent alike to pleasure or to toil.

The fakirs were few but made up in strenuousness, what they lacked in numbers. Under a beautiful group of birch trees at one end of the Common was a pop corn man beside a table where bananas and boxed refreshments were sold. Another table at the other end of the Common was devoted to Red Clover Beer, which was exposed to the warm rays of the sun, and evidently was better fitted for the sense of sight than of taste. The usual African Dodger was superseded by an arrangement of rag dolls hung on wires, and a cigar was the reward of whoever could hit and turn over one of these dolls with a base ball, three throws for five cents.

At noon, the town furnished free hot coffee, and the neighborhood became a series of basket picnics. Our hostess regaled us on sandwiches, cold meats, doughnuts, cookies, pie and apples until the band resumed its trials and tribulations at one o'clock.

The serious exercises of the day, however, were held in the church. This comfortable looking building was fairly well filled and the summer visitors gazed with interest at the choir arrangement in the corner of the edifice. Here a portion of the floor had been raised about two feet, and the choir, increased for the occasion, were in front of a parlor organ in the extreme corner, all partially facing the audience. When all had assembled, and with the vestibules and doorways crowded with those too bashful to take the front seats, the program was opened by the local celebrity. Every town has such a functionary and in this particular instance the celebrity had more than a local renown. He was the highest official of a strong association in the state and it was hinted that he was in line for the governorship.

This gentleman made a graceful speech of welcome, and called upon the choir to voice the same sentiment in song. The words were written for the occasion, of course, and were sung to the tune of "Greenland's Ice Mountains," extremely cooling on an August day.

One lady in the front row of the choir attracted the attention of the irreverent by the manner in which each note was enunciated. She had long passed the bloom of youth, and there was a suspicion that many teeth were absent. But there was no question as to the size of the mouth nor to the heartiness of her singing. As some particularly pleasing sentiment was sung, she would roll her eyes towards a distant corner of the church in a most soulful manner, and evidently enjoyed every moment of her brief notoriety.

There was prayer by a visiting clergyman, a rambling and totally irrelevant speech concluding with a few verses which were in excruciatingly bad taste for a church, by an elderly gentleman, who had evidently achieved distinction in the great city from which he came, by other qualities than public speaking. He was followed by a typical Yankee in appearance and nasal twang, whose remarks had the merit of humor, appropriateness and brevity. Another son of the town continued in similar fashion, followed by an original poem, which seemed to jingle merrily, from the scattering parts which were occasionally heard as the author hurriedly mumbled them over. A clear cut, neat little speech from a cultured physician, who claimed the village as his native place, was a delight to hear. The speaking ended with a visiting clergyman who had married a native of the town and thereby claimed to be a son in law. He told a mournful story to illustrate the home sentiment, and urged the farmers to make their places pleasant for the boys, as well as for the summer visitors. The girls were evidently not worth noticing, as the speaker did not once mention them.

The regular choir then sang another original hymn, in which the metallic and falsetto qualities of the voices added greatly to the effect of the music.

Another band concert followed on the Common, and then all adjourned to another part of the town where a baseball game ended the official festivities.

In the evening we attended a dance in the Town Hall. This building was nearly square in shape and had the words, "Faith, Hope, Charity and Fidelity" emblazoned upon its front wall. A stage with a back ground of scenery for theatricals, was used by the orchestra and the floor was white with the wax which sought to cover up its unevenness. A square, squat stove in one corner and many feet of the inevitable stove pipe were much in evidence. The orchestra arrived in two sections and the march and circle, delayed for a long time in the vain hope that the second section might arrive, was danced to the music of two violins and a flute. The second section arrived soon after and until two o'clock, round dances followed square, the orchestra vying with each other in a noble but ineffectual effort to harmonize, although keeping excellent time withal.

The posters for this dance announced that "This will be a nice party" and the management kept their word to the letter. "B. Edwards' Ice Cream and Cake were served for lunch" and old home day in Temple was a thing of the past.

But after all, the real meaning of the day, is not affected by the quaintness nor the oddness of one or two persons or events. It means a sentiment that enables all who hold it. It means home, and father and mother, sisters and brothers, in a form that appeals irresistibly to the heart. It strengthens all true patriotism, better than any other method, and from it the nation derives its true value and power.

All honor to the men and women of the hamlet of Temple, long may you observe "old home day" in your own corner and way, and long may your characters, ripened amid the grandeur of your mountains, strengthened by your beautiful hills, and deepened by your peaceful valleys, add power to our great nation, and lustre to the brightness of your state.

Political Notes.

It is all right for Judge Parker to explain where he stands on the money question, but there is nothing in the convention record to show that his party stands with him.

American voters will hardly forget their experience when they applied the Democratic back-pedal on an upgrade.

A convention may be trapped to nominate a candidate who does not stand on the platform but it is a different proposition to induce the voters to support such a candidate at the polls. Democratic managers admit this by giving up hope of carrying any of the Western States which went for Bryan in 1896 and 1900.

Captain Hobson and Democratic orators of that school bitterly denounce President Roosevelt. There is no objection, if it pleases them, for it does not bother Mr. Roosevelt a little bit.

Col. Bryan says that Hamlet is his favorite play. Judge Parker probably fears that the grave digger is the Colonel's favorite character in the play.

Silver Democrats must agree with Kuropatkin in his fear of the final triumph of the yellow peril.

The Democratic solid South will be offset this year by a Republican solid West.

Even a casual reading of figures of America's growing export trade will cure any pessimism on the part of those who question the permanency of prosperity under Republican policies.

The Republican party stands pledged to the policy of protecting American industries. The Democratic party opposes this policy without offering anything in place of it.

The Democrats of the West are more interested in again securing control of the party, in 1908, than they are in what will happen to Parker and Belmont in 1904.

There is a general suspicion in Democratic circles that Judge Parker would run better if Cleveland and Hill were not so conspicuous on the coaching lines.

Judge Parker's conversion to the gold standard bears a later date, evidently, than when he voted for Bryan in 1900. He allowed the New York Democratic convention, as late as last April to dodge the issue.

The trouble with the Democratic candidate for the Presidency seems to be that he is too radical for the conservative Democrats and too conservative for the radicals, and between them there is still a breach which divides them irreconcilably.

After all, the Republican party's chief source of strength lies in the fact that its principles appeal to the rugged common sense of the American people.

in the reading matter, or $1.00 per inch in the advertising columns.

A movement is now under way to improve the street terminus at the Riverside station. The plan contemplates an opportunity for carriages to turn around and a greater opportunity to handle the traffic which passes through this station. It is a fact not generally known that as many, if not more, trains per day stop at this station than at any other local station in the state. The travel surely demands adequate opportunity for rapid passage to and fro.

The comrades of Chas. Ward Post
62 G. A. R. are certainly to be congratulated upon the very successful manner in which they entertained the visiting veterans from Chicago. The detail of their arrangements was complete to the letter and deserves the utmost praise.

It will be good news indeed to our community to learn that Representative E. W. Warren has consented to stand for another year at the State House. Newton's team in the Legislature next year will be hard to beat.

Perhaps the most unique political utterance of the year is that of G.
W. Phelps of Easthampton, whose name has been mentioned in connection with the nomination for the house in the 2d Hampshire district.
In a letter to the Springfield Republican, Mr. Phelps says:

"Will you kindly allow me to inform the voters—of all parties—of the 2d Hampshire representative district that I positively decline the nomination as a candidate for representative of that district to the general court for the ensuing term, heartily thanking them for their courtesy, and for the high honor bestowed upon me, in suggesting my name for the office,
me, the least among the many mighty
of my fellow-townsmen whose names have already been published in the local papers. The principal reasons for my refusal are natural modesty and diffidence, inability to financially compete with the several millionaires reported to be contending for the November races, and who usually have a cinch at the poll-box; lack of pull which the legal fraternity are supposed to have up their sleeves, and who are signing for a winter's sojourn on Beacon hill, and that which is of far more importance to me,
absence of push, and political knowledge possessed by our respected veteran town officials, attained by their varied experiences—some of them sad, very, very sad—in many a former hard-fought, red-hot political campaign—they, too, think a temporary home by the sea most congenial to their esthetic tastes. These reasons, and minor considerations make any attempt on my part to achieve political glory seem to me already a forlorn hope. But yet I am in the hands of my friends, and if they still consider it my duty to set aside personal inclinations and accept the nominations—I am not particular from which party—and that the salvation of the 2d Hampshire representative district depends entirely upon my representing it at the state house
the coming winter, I will at least consider the matter"—Practical Politics.

Norumbega Park

Norumbega Park—Norumbega Park broke its own record again last Sunday in attendance figures and up to date Aug. 28, of the year 1904 has the latest red circle around it to indicate that there was the largest Sunday crowd in the existence of Norum-bega. In this respect of drawing immense crowds on Sunday Norum-bega park is different from any other amusement place in the country.
Other parks have band concerts on Sunday, or even a vaudeville program or perhaps the drawing card may be the fact that beer is on tap, but Norumbega Park has none of these things. Their very absence may be the magnet that holds the great Sunday crowds to Norumbega. There will be band concerts as a special feature for Labor Day, and an exceptional vaudeville performance in the theatre is provided for all next week.

For Third District Councillor.

MR. G. FRED SIMPSON.

The candidacy of Mr. G. Fred Simpson of this city for the Republican nomination for Councillor in the third district was recently announced. Mr. Simpson, who has been a resident of Newton for thirty years, and a loyal member of the Republican party
all his life, has never before been a candidate for political office, and his numerous friends will be exceedingly glad of this opportunity to show their regard for him.

Mr. Simpson is a native of Sullivan, Me.
and was educated in the common schools of his native place. As a young man he enlisted in the 20th Maine Regiment and saw considerable service in the Civil War, until he was honorably discharged with his regiment in 1863.

Shortly after the war, with his brother
James, he organized the firm of Simpson
Bros., now the well known Simpson Bros.
Corporation, and for 35 years has had a successful and honorable career in the concrete paving business.

With strong business ability, sound judgment, and a genial, yet dignified personality, Mr. Simpson will prove a popular candidate, and his friends are confident of his success in the convention.

The State Treasurership Contest

In measuring up the contest for the State Treasurership—really the only contest that is to come before the coming State Convention—it seems to us that the question to be considered is the fitness of the man rather than locality, personal ambitions, or personal rewards. If there is one office provided for on the State ticket more than another, that demands ability and that calls for the very best possible judgment, it is that of State Treasurer. We can well understand that in some cases, the locality question may call for consideration, but in selecting a man to care for the finances of the Commonwealth, he should be pre-eminently the best man that can be chosen, without reference to whether his residence is in the eastern or western part of the State.

Massachusetts has always taken pride in her successful men and has somehow established the precedent of bestowing honors on those who have made a successful career for themselves by their own effort. In every instance the ideal set up by the average Massachusetts citizen as a qualification for high position, is merit rather than "Political Pull" or inordinate ambition. In considering the candidacy for the State Treasurership therefore this fact should be taken into account.

Col. John J. Whipple, Ex-Mayor of Brockton, meets, as we view the present contest all these requirements
more fully than does any other candidate now before the people. He is in the best sense of the term, distinctly a self-made man. He has climbed from the lowest to the highest rung of the ladder. He has had a business training in financial affairs that has fitted him peculiarly for the high office of State Treasurer. He is a man of broad ideas, excellent judgment, and large business experience, particularly along financial lines. He will give dignity to the office, and will, by the employment of his exceptional knowledge and ability, be sure to administer its affairs in a way that will maintain the high financial credit which the old Day State has always had and in which it takes peculiar pride.

Death of Edward Upham.

Mr. Edward Upham, a native of Newton and one of its oldest citizens died at his residence on Cherry street West Newton, last Sunday at the age of 85 years. He was born in Newton Dec. 23, 1818, and had resided here
the greater part of his life. In early manhood he was engaged in the grocery business and later entered the shoe business on his own account.

In July 1853 he entered the employ of the Boston Belting Company and has continued in their service as cashier until his death. A record of 51 years of continuous and faithful employment with one concern is unique and reflects credit alike upon the employer and employee.

Mr. Upham is survived by two sons and two daughters, his wife having died some years ago.
The funeral was held from his late residence on Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, Rev. Dr. Prudden conducting the services, assisted by Rev.
Dr. Patrick. Dr. Patrick referred feelingly to Mr. Upham's faithful services and to his 42 years' membership in the Second Congregational Church. The Mendelssohn quartet sang "Nearer My God to Thee."

"Passing Out of the Shadow" and "Eternal Goodness." The pall bearers were Messrs Kollock, Kollock, Kingsbury and Dr. Knight.

During the funeral, the offices of the Boston Belting Co were closed and the officers, directors and department heads attended the services in a body. The interment was at Newton Cemetery.

THE PLAYHOUSE.

Boston Theatre—"Quincy Adams Sawyer," the great rural New England play, which has had several remarkably successful engagements at the Boston Theatre, will open the season at that play house on tomorrow night, and will continue to be the attraction for the following week only,
with an extra matinee on Labor Day,
in addition to the regular Wednesday and Saturday matinee. The scenic production will be new and will be seen to especial advantage with the excellent lighting effects made possible by the new electric switchboard installed by Manager McCarthy at an expense of over $6,000. The cast will be much the same as last season, nearly all the old favorites appearing in their original role. As the engagement is for one week only seats should be secured in advance.

Street Railway Notes

"The Boston and Worcester Electric Railroad is the finest interurban trolley system in the country, and is superior to 90 per cent of the steam roads in the United States," was the statement made by Mr. H. H. Vreeland, president of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company of New York, in a speech at the Country Club dinner recently given in honor of Mr.
Vreeland and his New York associates, by James F. Shaw, president of the Boston and Worcester line.
"The Boston and Worcester," said
Mr. Vreeland, "is equipped with all the latest and most perfect safety devices, and I can only be envious of Mr. Shaw and his associates and try to emulate their property in the equipment of the Metropolitan roads."

CHAPTER XXXIV.

HEY stood and watched them go. "Oh, the great man! Oh, the great man!" murmured the writer, fascinated.

The grandeur of the sacrifice had struck them dumb. They did not understand the motives beneath it all, but the fact was patent. Big Junko broke down and sobbed.

After a time the stream of logs through the gap slackened. In a moment more, save for the inevitably stranded few, the booms were empty. A deep sigh went up from the attentive multitude.

"She's gone!" said one man, with the emphasis of a novel discovery, and groaned.

Then the awe broke from about their minds, and they spoke many opinions and speculations. Thorpe had disappeared. They respected his emotion and did not follow him.

"It was just plain foolishness, but it was great," said Shearer. "That no account Jackass of a Big Junko ain't worth as much per thousand feet as good white pine."

Then they noticed a group of men gathering about the office steps, and on it some one talking. Collins, the bookkeeper, was making a speech.

Collins was a little hatchet faced man, with straight, lank hair, near-sighted eyes, a timid, order loving disposition and a great suitability for his profession. He was accurate, unemotional and valuable. All his actions were as dry as the sawdust in the burner. No one had ever seen him excited. But he was human, and now his knowledge of the company's affairs showed him the dramatic contrast. He knew. He knew that the property of the firm had been mortgaged to the last dollar in order to assist expansion, so that not another cent could be borrowed to tide over present difficulty. He knew that the notes for $60,000 covering the loan to Wallace Carpenter came due in three months. He knew from the long table of statistics which he was eternally preparing and comparing that the season's cut should have netted a profit of $200,000, enough to pay the interest on the mortgages, to take up the notes and to furnish a working capital for the ensuing year. These things he knew in the strange concrete architectural manner of the routine bookkeeper. Other men saw a desperate phase of firm rivalry. He saw a struggle to the uttermost. Other men cheered a rescue. He thrilled over the magnificent gesture of the gambler scattering his stake in largesse to death.

It was the simple turning of the hand from full breathed prosperity to lifeless failure.

His view was the inverse of his master's. To Thorpe it had suddenly become a very little thing in contrast to the great, sweet, elemental truth that the dream girl had enunciated. To Collins the affair was miles vaster than the widest scope of his own narrow life.

The firm could not take up its notes when they came due; it could not pay the interest on the mortgages, which would now be foreclosed; it could not even pay in full the men who had worked for it—that would come under a court's adjudication.

He had therefore watched Thorpe's desperate rally to mend the weakened chain in all the suspense of a man whose entire universe is in the keeping of the chance moment. It must be remembered that at bottom, below the outer consciousness, Thorpe's final decision had already grown to maturity. On the other hand, no other thought than that of accomplishment had even entered the little bookkeeper's head. The rescue and all that it had meant had hit him like a stroke of apoplexy, and his thin emotions had curdled to hysteria. Full of the idea he appeared before the men.

With rapid, almost incoherent speech he poured it out to them. Professional caution and secrecy were forgotten. Wallace Carpenter attempted to push through the ring for the purpose of stopping him. A gigantic river man kindly but firmly held him back.

"I guess it's just as well we hear this," said the latter.

It came out—the loan to Carpenter, with a hint at the motive—the machinations of the rival firm on the board of trade; the notes, the mortgages, the necessity of a big season's cut; the reasons the rival firm had for wishing to prevent that cut from arriving at the market; the desperate and varied means they had employed. The men listened, silent. Hamilton, his eyes glowing like coals, drank in every word. Here was the master motive he had sought; here was the story great to his mind.

"That's what we ought to get!" cried Collins, almost weeping. "And now we're gone and lost just because that infernal river hog had to fall off a boom! It's a shame! Those scoundrels have done us after all!"

Out from the shadows of the woods stole Injun Charley. The whole bearing and aspect of the man had changed. His eye gleamed with a distant, farseeing fire of his own, which took no account of anything but some remote vision. He stole along almost furtively, but with a proud, upright carriage of his neck, a backward tilt of his fine head, a distension of his nostrils, that lent to his appearance a panther-like pride and stealthiness. No one saw him. Suddenly he broke through the group and mounted the steps beside Collins.

"The enemy of my brother is gone," said he simply in his native tongue, and with a sudden gesture held out before them—a scalp.

The medieval barbarity of the thing appalled them for a moment. The days of scalpings were long since past, had been closed away between the pages of forgotten histories, and yet here again before them was the thing in all its living horror. Then a growl arose. The human animal had tasted blood.

All at once, like wild, their wrongs mounted to their head. They remembered their dead comrades. They remembered the heart breaking days and nights of toil they had endured on account of this man and his associates. They remembered the words of Collins, the little bookkeeper. They hated. They shook their fists across the skies. They turned and with one accord struck back for the railroad right of way which led to Shingleville, the town controlled by Morrison & Daly.

The railroads lay for a mile straight through a thick tamarack swamp, then over a nearly treeless cranberry plain. The tamarack was a screen between the two towns. When half way through the swamp Red Jacket stopped, removed his coat, ripped the lining from it and began to fashion a rude mask.

"Just as well they don't recognize us," said he.

"Somebody in town will give us away," suggested Shorty, the chore boy. "No, they won't; they're all here," assured Kerlie.

It was true. Except for the women and children, who were not yet about, the entire village had assembled. Even old Vanderhoof, the fire catcher of the yard, hobbled along breathlessly on his rheumatic legs. In a moment more the masks were fitted; in a moment more the little band had emerged from the shelter of the swamp and so came into full view of its objective point.

Shingleville consisted of a big mill, the yards, now nearly empty of lumber, the large frame boarding house, the office, the stable, a store, two saloons and a dozen dwellings. The party at once fixed its eyes on this collection of buildings and trudged on down the right of way with unhastening grimness.

Their approach was not unobserved. Daly saw them, and Baker, his foreman, saw them. The two at once went forth to organize opposition. When the attacking party reached the mill yard it found the boss and the foreman standing alone on the sawdust, revolvers drawn.

Daly traced a line with his toe. "The first man that crosses that line gets it," said he.

They knew he meant what he said. An instant's pause ensued, while the big man and the little faced a mob. Daly's river men were still on drive. He knew the mill men too well to depend on them. Truth to tell, the possibility of such a raid as this had not occurred to him for the simple reason that he did not anticipate the discovery of his complicity with the forces of nature. Skillfully carried out, the plan was a good one. No one need know of the weakened link, and it was the most natural thing in the world that Sadler & Smith's drive should go out with the increase of water.

The men grouped swiftly and silently on the other side of the sawdust line. The pause did not mean that Daly's defense was good.

"Do you know what's going to happen to you?" said a voice from the group. The speaker was Radway, but the contractor kept himself well in the background. "We're going to burn your mill; we're going to burn your yards; we're going to burn your whole shooting match, you low lived whelp!"

"Dyer," said Injun Charley sharply, shaking the wet scalp across his length to ward the lumbermen.

At this grim interruption a silence fell. The owner paled slightly; his foreman chewed a nonchalant straw. Down the still deserted street crossed and recrossed the subtle occult influences of a half hundred concealed watchers. Daly and his subordinate were very much alone and very much in danger. Their last hour had come, and they knew it.

With the recognition of the fact they immediately raised their weapons in the resolve to do as much damage as possible before being overpowered.

Then suddenly, full in the back, a heavy stream of water knocked them completely off their feet, rolled them over on the wet sawdust and finally jammed them both against the trestle, where it held them, kicking and gasping for breath, in a choking extract of water. The pistol flew harmlessly into the air. For an instant the Fighting Forty stared in paralyzed astonishment. Then a tremendous roar of laughter saluted this easy vanquishment of a formidable enemy.

Daly and Baker were pounced upon and captured. There was no resistance. They were too nearly strangled for that. Little Solly and old Vanderhoof turned off the water in the fire hydrant and disconnected the hose they had so effectively employed.

"There, blast you!" said Railway Charley, jerking the mill man to his feet. "How do you like too much water, hey?"

The unexpected comedy changed the party's mood. It was no longer a question of killing. A number broke into the store and shortly emerged bearing palls of kerosene, with which they deluged the slabs on the windward side of the mill. The flames caught the structure instantly. A thousand sparks, borne by the offshore breeze, fastened like so many stinging insects on the lumber in the yard.

It burned as dried balsam thrown on a camp fire. The heat of it drove the onlookers far back in the village, where in silence they watched the destruction. Daly and his man were slapped and cuffed hither and thither at the men's will. Their faces bloated, their bodies ached as one bruise.

"That squires us," said the men. "If we can't cut this year, neither kin you. It's up to you now!"

Then, like a destroying horde of locusts, they gutted the office and the store, smashing what they could not carry to the fire. The dwellings and saloons they did not disturb. Finally, about noon, they kicked their two prisoners into the river and straggled back along the right of way.

"I surmise we took that town apart some!" said Shorty with satisfaction.

"I should rise to remark," replied Kerlie.

At the boarding house they found Wallace Carpenter and Hamilton seated on the veranda. It was now afternoon. The wind had abated somewhat, and the sun was struggling with the still flying clouds.

"Hello, boys," said Wallace, "been for a little walk in the woods?"

"Yes, sir," replied Hyland. "We—"

"I'd rather not hear," interrupted Wallace. "There's quite a fire over east. I suppose you haven't noticed it."

Hyland looked gravely eastward.

"Sure 'nough," said he.

"Better get some grub," suggested Wallace.

After the men had gone in he turned to the Journalist.

"Hamilton," he began, "write all you know about the drive and the break and the rescue, but as to the burning of the mill—"

The other held out his hand.

"Good," said Wallace, offering his own.

And that was as far as the famous Shingleville raid ever got. Daly did his best to collect even circumstantial evidence against the participants, but in vain. He could not even get any one to say that a single member of the village of Carpenter had absented himself from town that morning. This might have been from loyalty or it might have been from fear of the vengeance the Fighting Forty would surely visit on a traitor. Probably it was a combination of both. The fact remains, however, that Daly never knew surely of but one man implicated in the destruction of his plant. That man was Injun Charley; but Injun Charley promptly disappeared.

After an interval Tim Shearer, Radway and Kerlie came out again.

"Where's the boss?" asked Shearer.

"I don't know, Tim," replied Wallace seriously. "I've looked everywhere. He's gone. He must have been all out to get over it. I am not worrying. Harry has lots of sense. He'll come in about dark."

"Sure!" said Tim.

"How about the boys' stakes?" queried Radway. "I hear this is a bad smash for the firm."

"We'll see that the men get their wages all right," replied Carpenter, a little disappointed that such a question should be asked at such a time.

"All right," rejoined the contractor. "We're all going to need our money this summer."

CHAPTER XXXV.

THORPE walked through the silent group of men without seeing them. He had no thought for what he had done, but for the triumphant discovery he had made in spite of himself.

It was then about 6 o'clock in the morning. Thorpe passed the boarding house, the store and the office, to take himself as far as the little open shed that served as a railway station. There he set the telephone to flag the east bound train from Duluth. At 6:35, the train happened on time, he climbed aboard. He dropped heavily into a seat and stared straight in front of him until the conductor had spoken to him twice.

"Where to, Mr. Thorpe?" he asked.

"Oh! Mackinaw City."

Thorpe descended at Mackinaw City to find that the noon train had gone. He ate lunch at the hotel, borrowed $100 from the agent of Louis Sands, a lumberman of his acquaintance, and seated himself rigidly in the little waiting room, there to remain until the 9:20 that night. When the cars were backed down from the siding he boarded the sleeper. In the doorway stood a disapproving colored porter.

"You'll find the smokers' car up fore'ard, sah," said the latter, firmly barring the way.

"It's generally forward," answered Thorpe.

"This year's the sleepin'," protested the functionary. "You pays extra."

"I am aware of it," replied Thorpe curtly. "Give me a lower."

"Yes, sah," acquiesced the darky, giving way, but still in doubt. He followed Thorpe cautiously, peering into the smoking room on him from time to time. A little after 12 his patience gave out. The stolid, gloomy man of lower 6 seemed to intend sitting up all night.

"Yo' berth is ready, sah," he delicately suggested.

Thorpe arose obediently, walked to lower 6 and without undressing threw himself on the bed. Afterward the porter in conscientious discharge of his duty looked diligently beneath the seat for boots to polish. Happening to glance up after fruitless search he discovered the boots still adorning the feet of their owner.

"Well, for the land's sake!" ejaculated the scandalized negro, beating a hasty retreat.

Thorpe descended at Twelfth street in Chicago without any clear notion of where he was going. For a moment he faced the long, parklike expanse of the lake front, then turned sharply to his left and picked his way south up the interminable reaches of Michigan avenue. Black after black he clicked along, the corks of his boots striking fire from the pavement.

After an interval he seemed to have left the smoke and dirt behind. The street became quieter; boarding houses and tailors' shops ceased; here and there appeared a bit of lawn, shrubbery and flowers. By and by he came to himself to find that he was staring at the deep carved lettering in a stone horse block before a large dwelling.

His mind took the letters in one after the other, perceiving them plainly before he accorded them recognition. Finally he had completed the word "Farland." He whirled sharp on his heel, mounted the broad white stone steps and rang the bell.

It was answered almost immediately by a clean shaven, portly and dignified man with the most impressive countenance in the world. This man looked upon Thorpe with lofty disapproval.

"Is Miss Hilda Farland at home?" he asked.

"I cannot say," replied the man. "If you will step to the back door I will ascertain."

"The flowers will do. Now see that the south room is ready, Annie," floated a voice from within.

Without a word, but with a deadly earnestness, Thorpe reached forward, seized the astonished servant by the collar, yanked him bodily outside the door, stepped inside and strode across the hall toward a closed portiere whence had come the voice. The river man's long spikes cut little triangular pieces from the hardwood floor. Thorpe did not notice that. He thrust aside the portiere.

Before him he saw a young and beautiful girl. She was seated, and her lap was filled with flowers. At his sudden apparition her hands flew to her heart, and her lips slightly parted. For a second the two stood looking at each other, just as nearly a year before their eyes had crossed over the old pole trail.

To Thorpe the girl seemed more beautiful than ever. The red of this violent unexpected encounter rushed to her face, her bosom rose and fell in a fluttering catch for breath, but her eyes were steady and inquiring.

Then the butler pounced on Thorpe from behind with the intent to do great bodily harm.

"Morris!" commanded Hilda sharply. "what are you doing?"

The man cut short his heroism in confusion.

"You may go," concluded Hilda.

Thorpe stood straight and unwinking by the portiere. After a moment he spoke.

"I have come to tell you that you were right and I was wrong," said he steadily. "You told me there could be nothing better than love. In the pride of my strength I told you this was not so. I was wrong."

He stood for another instant looking directly at her, then turned sharply and, head erect, walked from the room.

Before he had reached the outer door the girl was at his side.

"Why are you going?" she asked.

"I have nothing more to say."

"Nothing?"

"Nothing at all."

She laughed happily to herself.

"But I have—much. Come back."

They returned to the little morning room. Thorpe's calked boots gouging out the little triangular furrows in the hardwood floor. Neither noticed that.

"What are you going to do now?" she catheched, facing him in the middle of the room. A long tendril of her beautiful corn silk hair fell across her eyes; her red lips parted in a faint, wistful smile; beneath the draperies of her loose gown the pure slender lines of her figure leaned toward him.

"I am going back," he replied patiently.

"I knew you would come," said she. "I have been expecting you. Oh, Harry," she breathed, with a sudden flash of insight, "you are a man born to be much misunderstood."

He held himself rigid, but in his veins was creeping a molten fire, and the fire was beginning to glow dully in his eye. Her whole being called him.

And still she stood there before him, saying nothing, leaning slightly toward him, her red lips parted, her eyes fixed almost wistfully on his face.

"Go away," he whispered hoarsely at last. The voice was not his own. "Go away! Go away!"

Suddenly she swayed to him.

"Oh, Harry, Harry," she whispered. "I must tell you! Don't you see?"

The blood broke through him. He seized her hungrily. He crushed her to him until she gasped; he pressed his lips against hers until she all but cried out with pain of it; he ran his great brown hands blindly through her hair until it came down about them both in a cloud of spun light.

"Tell me," he whispered. "Tell me!"

"Oh, oh!" she cried. "Please! What is it?"

"I do not believe it," he murmured savagely.

She drew herself from him with gentle dignity.

334 BOYLSTON ST.

(Opposite the Arlington Street Church)

WILL RE-OPEN IN ITS NEW BUILDING, SEPT. 6, 1904.

This school now has the most elegant, complete and extensive private school building in America. In the planning and furnishing of its NEW BUILDING expense has not been considered even in the minutest detail. New fittings of special design will be found to have taken the place of the ordinary furniture used in school buildings. The entire outfit of the school in its old building has been sacrificed that the school in the new home might have only the newest and best obtainable.

EXPERIENCED TEACHERS. The only feature recognizable will be the able and experienced corps of teachers who have given this school its wide-spread reputation. The tuition fees are the same as during the previous ten years, and pupils who contemplate attending may congratulate themselves that this year was the chosen time for their commercial course and the finishing of their school work.

COURSE OF STUDY. The course of study prepares pupils thoroughly for all the duties of the Counting-room, Book-keeping (by any system), Stenography (Graham and Pitman systems), English Composition, Commercial Correspondence, Commercial Law, Commercial Geography, Commercial Hand-writing, Typewriting, Civil Service (preparation for examinations), Normal School Course (preparation for teaching).

Pupils will find the location of the school most accessible from all points; over 400 cars daily, with a stopping place directly in front of the school building. No agents, solicitors or canvassers are employed by this institution. For full particulars see Year Book for 1904-5, free.

CLARA D. WHITMAN REED, M. D.

Residence and Office, 140 Church

"I am not worthy to say it," she said soberly. "I love you with all my heart and soul."

Then for the first and only time in his life Thorpe fell to weeping, while she, understanding, stood by and comforted him.

The few moments of Thorpe's tears eased the emotional strain under which perhaps unconsciously he had been laboring for nearly a year past. The tenderness of his nerves relaxed. He savored deliberately the joy of a luxurious couch, rich hangings, polished floor, subdued light, warm atmosphere. He watched with soul deep gratitude the soft girlish curves of Hilda's body, the poise of her flower head, the plump, half-wistful, half-childish set of her red lips, the clear starlike glimmer of her dusky eyes. It was all new to him—his.

"Kiss me, dear," she said.

She leaned her cheeks against her hand and her hand against his shoulder.

"I have been reading a story lately," said she, "that has interested me very much. It was about a man who renounced all he held most dear to shield a friend."

"Yes," said Thorpe.

"Then he renounced all his most valuable possessions because a poor common man needed the sacrifice?"

"Sounds like a medieval story," said he, with unconscious humor.

"It happened recently," rejoined Hilda. "I read it in the papers."

"Well, he blazed a good trail," was Thorpe's sighing comment. "Probably

"Go away!" he whispered.

he had his chance. We don't all of us get that. Things go crooked and get tangled up, so we have to do the best we can. I don't believe I'd have done it."

"Oh, you are delicious!" she cried.

After a time she said very humbly: "I want to beg your pardon for misunderstanding you and causing you so much suffering. I was very stupid and didn't see why you could not do as I wanted you to."

"That is nothing to forgive. I acted like a fool."

"I have known about you," she went on. "It has all come out in the papers. It has been very exciting. Poor boy, you look tired."

He straightened himself suddenly. "I have forgotten—actually forgotten," he cried, a little bitterly. "Why, I am a pauper, a bankrupt. I—"

"Harry," she interrupted gently, but very firmly, "you must not say what you were going to say. I cannot allow it. Money came between us before. It must not do so again. Am I not right, dear?"

She smiled at him with the lips of a child and the eyes of a woman.

"Yes," he agreed after a struggle.

"You are right. But now I must begin all over again. It will be a long time before I shall be able to claim you. I have my way to make."

"Yes," said she diplomatically.

"But you!" he cried suddenly. "The papers remind me. How about that Morton?"

"What about him?" asked the girl, astonished. "He is very happily engaged."

Thorpe's face slowly filled with blood.

"You'll break the engagement at once," he commanded, a little harshly.

"Why should I break the engagement?" demanded Hilda, eying him with some alarm.

"You actually don't think he's engaged to me?" she burst out finally.

"Isn't he?" asked Thorpe.

"Why, no, stupid! He's engaged to Elizabeth Carpenter, Wallace's sister. Now where did you get that silly idea?"

"I saw it in the paper."

"And you believe all you see? Why didn't you ask Wallace? But of course you wouldn't. Harry, you are the most incoherent dumb old brute I ever saw. I could shake you. You need a wife to interpret things for you. You speak a different language from most people."

She said this between laughing and crying, between a sense of the ridiculous uselessness of withholding a single timely word and a tender pathetic intuition of the suffering such a nature must endure.

Suddenly she jumped to her feet with an exclamation.

"Oh, Harry, I'd forgotten utterly!" she cried in laughing consternation. "I have a luncheon here at half past five. It's almost that now. I must run and dress. Just look at me; just look! you did that."

"I'll wait here until the confounded thing is over," said Thorpe.

"Oh, no, you won't!" replied Hilda decidedly. "You are going downtown right now and get something to put on. Then you are coming back here to stay."

Thorpe glanced in surprise at his driver's clothes and his spiked boots.

"Heavens and earth!" he exclaimed. "I should think so! How can I get out without ruining the floor?"

Hilda laughed and drew aside the portiere.

"Don't you think you have done that pretty well already?" she asked.

"There, don't look so solemn. We're not going to be sorry for a single thing we've done today, are we?" She stood close to him, searching his face wistfully with her fathomless dusky eyes.

"No, sweetheart, we are not," replied Thorpe soberly.

Coming Attractions

Tremont Theatre—The new Ade Luder opera, "The Sho-Gun," now in its second week at the Tremont Theatre, Boston, is proving by all odds the most successful production Henry W. Savage has ever brought out at this amusement place. Since the opening night the theatre has been packed at practically every performance, and the enthusiasm with which the piece is received leaves no room for doubt as to its popular success. George Ade's bright, witty and satirical lines are meeting with warm response from the audiences, and Gustav Luder's music is by all odds the most tuneful he has yet written. The score contains many number of individual numbers that are sure to be whistled, while its ensembles are rousing and thoroughly in keeping with the Luder's style of composition. The costumes and scenery are a strong feature of the production. Mr. Savage has never brought out a show on which he has expended more money for mounting than he has done in "The Sho-Gun." The color schemes are perfect, and in design the costumes are thoroughly in keeping with the atmosphere of the piece. The chorus is a large one and is made up of fresh young voices. The engagement of "The Sho-Gun" is a limited one. A holiday matinee will be given next Monday, Labor Day.

Majestic Theatre—Through the medium of Kirke La Shelle's production of "The Earl of Pawtucket," by Augustus Thomas, Mr. Lawrence D'Orsay sprang at once into the very first rank of present day stars, and he enjoys with the play the distinction of being the only attraction, aside from a musical comedy, to run an entire season, through a hot summer and well into the following season at a Broadway Theatre in New York. Subsequently Mr. D'Orsay played a highly successful engagement at the Majestic Theatre, Boston, to which he returns for a fortnight beginning Monday, Sept. 5th, opening with a special Labor Day matinee. There are complications enough to bewilder more than the innocent Earl who causes them; and the success which the play has been known to have met with in New York and in its tour, is an indication that these complications prove highly amusing to the average American audience. A special matinee of the Earl of Pawtucket is announced for Monday, Sept. 5, and regular matinees for the ensuing Wednesdays and Saturdays of the engagement.

Keith's Theatre—John Craig and Lillian Lawrence, the former stars of the Castle Square stock company, will be the principal entertainers in the Keith vaudeville bill next week, which will be their last appearance on the stage in Boston for some time. They will present the balcony scene from "Romeo and Juliet" which will be given a splendid stage setting by the management of the theatre. William Harcourt, the well known leading actor, is to make his vaudeville debut in Boston, presenting a comedy sketch entitled "A Dakota Widow." Other entertainers whose names are prominent on the program are James Harrigan, who was formerly billed as "The tramp juggler," but has now developed into one of the leading monologue comedians and topical singers in the varieties; Albertina Melish, who will exhibit a troupe of wonderfully trained birds, and Misses Lucie and Viata, noted wire performers, both acts having been imported direct from Europe for appearance on the Keith circuit; Finlay and Burke, in a comedy sketch, and Ray Cox, one of the cleverest singing and monologue comedians in the business. The Paedettes will have an entire change of musical selections, and all the motion pictures in the biograph will be renewed. It should be noted that the holiday, Monday, opening is at 11 o'clock a. m. and that on Tuesday and thereafter during the fall and winter seasons, the doors will open at 1 o'clock p. m. instead of at 1:30 as has been the custom during the summer.

Grand Opera House—Much to please the eye nothing to tire the ear is the secret of the success of "Eight Bells," the entertainment to be presented at the Grand Opera House next week opening with a Labor Day matinee. Without exaggeration the Byrne Brothers are presenting one of the very best pantomimic and acrobatic shows on the road. Many of the old features have been retained, notably that representing the cabin of the rolling ship, but the act is smooth and yet so comical that it will bear repetition once a season. The Byrne Brothers are artists of the first quality. They are supple and graceful acrobats and accomplished pantomimists. The entertainment is to be commended for the good taste which marks every feature of it. Some of the scenes are very notably funny, particularly that with the wild white horse and trick carriage, and the stateroom frolics on board an ocean steamer.

AN IMPOSING SPECTACLE.

The Opening of the Supreme Court of the United States.

As the hands of the clock point to 12 the erler of the supreme court of the United States rises with his gavel, the murmur of conversation ceases, and attorneys, court officials and visitors rise while the erler slowly announces, "The honorable the chief justice and the associate justices of the supreme court of the United States." Robed in black silk gowns, they walk with slow and dignified steps toward the bench, and as the chief justice appears at the entrance at the rear they slowly proceed to their seats. As they do the erler cries: "Oyez, oyez, oyez! All persons having business before the honorable justice of the supreme court of the United States are admonished to draw near and give their attention, for the court is now sitting. God save the government of the United States and this honorable court."

It is an imposing and inspiring spectacle, the mere witnessing of which increases the red corpuscles of one's patriotism. No man entering that domelike courtroom may wear his overcoat. No member of its bar may appear before it in a coat of any color other than black. Such is the dignity and impressiveness of that tribunal that men to whom embarrassment has long been a stranger evidence the renewal of their acquaintance with it by a stammering speech, a quickened breath, a nervous manner, when addressing the court.—Green Bag.

HOW TO TALK WELL.

You Can Acquire the Art by Study, Care and Practice.

The art of talking well—that is, with ease and intelligently—interesting those who listen and, rarest gift of all, leading them to talk their best in reply, is a natural gift. There is no doubt of this. The gift goes with what we call "personal magnetism." Yet one who has not this can learn to talk pleasantly, fluently and agreeably. First let him talk much to himself, not audibly, but forcing himself to formulate his ideas. What a man thinks clearly he should be able to put into words.

Next let him study what will please those with whom he talks rather than what interests himself. Please note that I say "talks with" and not "to." There is a great—an essential—difference, all the difference between conversing and lecturing.

"You never heard me preach, I believe?" said Coleridge to Charles Lamb. "I never heard you do anything else!" stammered the wit.

When you meet a man for the first time say something you think would draw him out. A fool can babble at length. Wisdom and courtesy are required to tempt others to speak with ease to themselves.

There is no royal road to becoming a good talker. Practice of the few simple rules I have indicated will help you on step by step.—Chicago News.

Ancient Worship of Animals.

The figures of the gods in ancient Egypt were represented on the monuments for ages in animal form. The organization of the local population ran on totem lines. Each city had different beast gods. In the royal genealogies beasts are named as ancestors, showing that the early Egyptians actually considered themselves descendants of animals. The primitive element in the early Greek religion has been preserved in the "sacred chapters" fragments of which have been given us by Herodotus, Pausanias and others, proving that the oldest images of the Grecian gods were represented in animal form and that the different royal houses claimed descent from animals, as do the savages of America and Australia. Mr. J. McLehman in his papers on "The Worship of Plants and Animals" calls our attention to many evidences that the early Romans as well as the Greeks worshipped totems.

Club Land in Japan.

Japan is the ideal club land. In this country the club world has a good many class and other limitations. But in Japan the system has flourished from time immemorial and enters into the daily life of all sorts and conditions of men. It is no uncommon thing for people of means to belong to from ten to a hundred different clubs, be they social, all of which exist mainly to give the members an opportunity for one festive gathering the more. In Tokyo there are 5,000 different societies, from the Red Cross to the Mustaches and the Pockmarked, which explain themselves.

WORLD'S FAIR SPECIAL DAYS

Events of Worldwide Importance Crowd One Another on the Season's Programme—Many Congresses and Conventions to Meet.

Letter to W. J. Forbush, West Newton.

Dear Sir: We manage to get some fun out of paint. J. H. Kohlmeier, Grove City, Pa., put in Devco. Along came a salesman of somebody else's paint before ours had got there. Salesman said ours was short-measure. Kohlmeier weakened hung-fire and flopped; stopped ours and took his.

It was our turn now. We emptied our can into his and his into ours. The short-measure was his, not ours; and we kept our can.

And, ever since then, that paint-manufacturer gives full-measure; his paint is not pure, but his gallon contains four quarts.

Go by the name; and the name to go by is Devco lead-and-zinc. Yours truly, F. W. Devco & Co. J. M. Briggs and Son sell our paint.

REPRESENTATIVE MEN ON THE WORLD'S FAIR

What Distinguished Statesmen and Others Say of the Educational and Inspiring Exposition at St. Louis.

The public utterances of distinguished men who have visited the world's fair have but one note, and that of emphatic praise. Here are some of their comments:

Hon. John Hay, secretary of state: "I have never seen nor heard of anything so fine."

Hon. Leslie M. Shaw, secretary of the treasury: "Any father of a bright boy can afford to send him to the Fair simply to study any one of at least a thousand exhibits."

Hon. Charles H. Grosvener of Ohio: "A visit of ten days by a man of ordinary aptness and appreciative capacity to the Fair is almost equal to a postgraduate course in a university."

Hon. Benjamin B. Odell, governor of New York: "St. Louis has been badly misrepresented by accounts which say that her weather is unbearable. The Fair is wonderful."

Hon. George C. Purdie, governor of California: "The governor of the Golden State, who has spent all his life within her borders, finds that he knew only a little about his state until he came to the Fair and saw all her varied products assembled together."

Hon. Albert B. Cummins, governor of Iowa: "The Louisiana Purchase Exposition is on the grandest scale of any exposition the world has ever seen."

Hon. Richard Yates, governor of Illinois: "The more I see of the Exposition the more I enjoy it."

Hon. Fenimore Chatterton, governor of Wisconsin: "I wish the Fair the greatest success. It certainly deserves it."

Hon. Franklin Murphy, governor of New Jersey: "It is well worth coming from New Jersey to see even a small part of the Fair."

Hon. A. B. White, governor of West Virginia: "I cannot speak too strongly of the greatness of this Fair."

Hon. William J. Bryan: "The Exposition is an unparalleled wonder."

Hon. John Sharp Williams, member of congress from Mississippi: "The most wonderful thing of its kind."

Hon. Hoke Smith of Georgia, formerly secretary of interior under President Cleveland: "I am highly pleased with the Exposition and believe it to be one of the triumphs of modern civilization."

Hon. Perry Belmont of New York: "In magnitude and beauty the Fair is wonderful. It is worth coming a long distance to see."

Hon. Daniel J. Campau, chairman of the Michigan delegation to the Democratic national convention at St. Louis: "It is positively sinful for parents to fail to bring their children to see the Fair."

M. Paul Dupuy, editor of Le Petit Parisien of Paris, France: "I admire the Exposition for its immensity, its spirit of the sublime, its general beauty and its completeness."

Prince George of Bavaria: "I have never seen anything prettier than the St. Louis World's Fair buildings when outlined at night with their millions of electric lights."

Hon. Louis E. McComas of Maryland: "The greatest Fair in the world."

Hon. John F. Dryden of New Jersey: "The people have no idea of the greatness of the Exposition. Every American should see it."

T. P. Shants, president of the Clover Leaf route of Chicago: "The Fair is a big success and will continue to become a greater success as it progresses."

WAGE EARNERS AT THE FAIR

Prominent Men Planning to Help Workers See the Great Exposition.

Wage earners of America are to see the World's Fair by tens of thousands under the auspices of the National Civic Federation. A new bureau of the Federation has just been established at St. Louis upon the World's Fair grounds. Back of the movement are Grover Cleveland, David R. Francis, Andrew Carnegie, Cornelius N. Bliss and others. Plans are making to have a vast number of the wage earners of the United States see the World's Fair, the most glorious spectacle of the age and the most influential factor in the education of the American citizen.

The bureau is in charge of Miss Gertrude Becks, secretary of the Federation's welfare department, of which Mr. H. H. Vreckend, head of the street railway system of New York city, is chairman. The bureau headquarters is in the east end of the Palace of Transportation, on the ground floor. The Exposition management is in hearty accord with this movement on the part of the Federation to induce the large manufacturers and other employers of labor to provide ways and means for the wage earners of America to visit the Exposition. President Francis is displaying personal interest in the undertaking by affording the Federation every facility for the consummation of its efforts, and in this connection he has directed Theodore Hardee, assistant to the secretary, to co-operate with Miss Becks and Ralph M. Ensley, chairman of the Federation's executive council, in every possible way.

The Exposition management has also equipped this bureau with clerical assistance and a full supply of World's Fair literature. The bureau will be used as headquarters for all wage earners coming to the Exposition under its auspices. The aim of the Federation is to make it feasible for the largest possible proportion of wage earners to visit St. Louis and see the World's Fair. It will see that they are met at the depot by responsible persons and conducted to suitable lodgings, where they will be treated fairly.

There will also be furnished, free of charge, appropriate itineraries indicating the points of interest to be seen within a limit of one week, which is about the average time each party will spend here. It will also indicate the objects of special interest to various craftsmen in their particular lines, so that they may devote as much time as possible to the objects of peculiar interest to them. These and many other efforts will be made to help all wage earners to enjoy the benefits of this great Exposition comfortably and at an expense within their means.

A Summer's Outing

A "Graphic" Man's Experiences in Europe

Rome, August 6th, 1904.

Dear Graphic: The weather in Rome had been unusually hot, even for the summer season, but fortunately for us a change came the day before we arrived and the temperature during our stay was all that one could wish for. I shall carry home with me the pleasantest memories of the Eternal City and shall cherish a hope that I may come again at some future time. The climate here is quite changeable and the variation between day and night, towards morning, is about ten degrees. The water of Rome cannot be excelled for purity and while the ancient city had fourteen aqueducts, at present four supplies amply a large quantity going to waste from the magnificent fountains in the squares and parks.

Rome is located on seven hills, selected on account of its fine location, and was founded 753 B. C. The Tiber, a navigable river with a swift current divides the city and flows into the Mediterranean about 18 miles away. Since the unification of the Italian states in 1870 the city has increased rapidly in population and now numbers about a half million souls. Victor Emmanuel III, who succeeded his father Humbert I after the latter's assassination in 1900 is the present king but we have not seen the royal family as they are away for the summer season. We are guests at the Hotel Avanzi Et Ville and only a few steps away is the palace now used by the Queen Mother, Margherita. Rome is one of the art centers of the world and its special industry is in reproducing the masterpieces of ancient and modern works in bronze, marble, on canvas and in mosaics.

With this brief summary let me give an account of some of the places visited and the impressions made. The first morning was free, giving us a little time for rest, but in the afternoon we took carriages and made a round of the churches. The first was the Santa Maria Maggiore the largest among the twenty-four in Rome, built in honor of the Virgin. Under the high altar rests the body of St. Matthew and in one of the chapels, in a box of silver and crystal, are fragments of the manger in which the infant Saviour was placed. This statement with many others we have heard must be taken on faith and with a very large grain of very salt.

The church of St. John Lateran proved interesting as did also the obelisk in front which is the largest in the city being over 140 feet in height and weighing 460 tons. On the opposite side of the square are the Scala Santa or holy stairs which tradition asserts were used by the Saviour in ascending to Pilate's Praetorium in Jerusalem and Martin Luther went up half way on his knees then changing his mind he rose to his feet and walked down. They were brought from Jerusalem by St. Helena the mother of Constantine. We also visited the tomb of Pius IX which is in the church of San Lorenzo outside the walls of the city.

The following morning was spent in the Forum a proper description of which would take several columns of space. Its history begins with Romulus and the Alban shepherds founding a colony on the Palatine Hill in 753 B. C. while the Sabines or mountaineers occupied the Quirinal Hill. The Romans called the valley between the hills Forum, and there they used to gather to transact civil, political and commercial business and later held gladiatorial combats and triumphal processions. During the middle ages it fell into disuse, gradually filling up with the dust of time, and became a waste ground for rubbish and a grazing field for cattle.

As interest revived in ancient history excavations were begun until now the greater part has been uncovered to the time of early Rome. In one place where workmen have dug deeper, about fifty feet, an Etruscan graveyard has been discovered and still ground untouched by the hand of man has not been found. As one takes a birdseye view of the Forum it resembles a building area that has been devastated by fire. Beginning near the Campidoglio Tower we first visited the Temple of Vesta where was kept burning by day and night the sacred fire of Vesta, symbol of the life and power of the Roman Empire. Near the shrine are the steps leading to the house where the Vestals had to pass thirty years in the service of the fire goddess; ten in learning, ten in practicing and ten in teaching the novices. Three beautiful Corinthian pillars are all that remains of the Temple of Castor and Pollux erected to record the battle of Regillus and the establishment of the Republic.

The Temple of Saturn at the foot of the Capitoline hill has been known as far back as history goes as the place for the worship of Vulcan and is conspicuous for its eight Ionic pillars with capitals and architrave standing near the end of the Basilica Julia. In the rooms underneath was kept the state treasure which Julius Caesar took by force during his struggle with Pompey in the civil war. The remains of the once magnificent temple of Concord were seen, erected to commemorate the agreement between the patricians and plebians after a long struggle for supremacy. In this temple Cicero delivered his fourth oration against Catiline and some of the Philippics. We saw the three arches of Septimius Severus, Titus and Constantine, read the interesting inscriptions and were told the history of each.

This was enough physically and mentally for one day, meaning as it does so much of the foundation of the world's history but the next day we visited the mamertine prison where it is said Saint Peter and Saint Paul were imprisoned and where many Christians were strangled to death and their bodies thrown into the Tiber. From the tower above we rested some time enjoying the magnificent view of the city with the mountains in the far distance and the domes of St. Peter's and other buildings near by. An afternoon was spent on the Palatine Hill where we went through the ruins of the old house of Livia, the widow of Augustus, saw the site of the circus, the ancient Roman race course, and the palace of Augustus. Sunday morning a party of us went to St. Peter's to hear mass with the fine music and in the afternoon was consummated an event I had hoped and worked for. I did not think before leaving home that one of the proper things to do was to see the Pope so when I arrived in Rome had made no plans. When members of our party began to talk about it I decided that it was something in the line of sight seeing that I should take in.

I called on Mr. Hector De Castro the United States Consul General and while officially he could do nothing still through an acquaintance, who proved to be a friend of mine, I secured a number of tickets. The audience at the Vatican was quite largely attended and during the able address given by His Holiness I watched him carefully. Surely the College of Cardinals have chosen wisely for a more winsome personality it has seldom been my privilege to see. His face combines benevolence and strong mental capacity and with his long white robes made a striking figure, while giving the papal benediction, that I shall long remember. As we went out across the great square of St. Peter's I looked back at the window above the entrance where the Pope gives his benediction. The last time it was opened was on August 4th, a year ago, when Cardinal Macchi proclaimed the election of Cardinal Sarro as Pope with the name of Pius X. For 25 years previously it had not been opened since the proclamation of Leo XIII.

The next place we visited was the sculptures in the Vatican, a fine collection, the most notable being the chariot and horses in the Hall of Biga, the disk thrower by Mirone, the spear bearer by Policetto, the Nile, Antinous as an Egyptian Bacchus, the Laocoon, Apollo Belvedere, Mercury, Torso-del-Belvedere, Apollo and Diana. The afternoon of the same day was spent in a ride up the Janiculum hill to the church of San Pietro in Montorio where a fine view of the city was had with the Sabine Mountains in the distance, forty miles away, the highest summits being 5,000 feet above the level of the Campagna.

Another morning was spent in the Pantheon, one of the few ancient buildings still standing and with its arched dome considered one of the finest structures in existence. The notable tombs are those of Raphael, Victor Emmanuel, the first king of Italy and his son Humbert. The ruins of the great baths of Caracalla, with a capacity for 1600 persons, were visited and several hours went quickly by in the Colosseum, begun by Vespasian in 79 A. D., and completed by his son Titus three years later. This circular building is one third of a mile in circumference outside and is 157 feet high. In its original condition there were 87,000 feet of seats with a capacity for 50,000 persons. The style of architecture is Greek and changes at each tier the first being Doric, the next Ionic and the third Corinthian. In the arena contests were held between man and man, man and beast and during the persecution of the Christians many met their death here by fire, sword and the wild beast. The name was given this great amphitheatre in honor of the colossal bronze gilt statue of Nero 118 feet high, which stood formerly in front of the building.

We secured entrance to the Rosphigiosi palace and feasted our eyes on the ceiling of the Central room where is Guido Reni's Aurora, the finest fresco in the world. Our last ride was to the Protestant Cemetery where we saw the graves of Shelley, Keats and Mrs. W. W. Story, whose son married Miss Emma Eames so well known in Newton, then by the Pyramid of Caius Cestius and on to St. Paul's church beyond the walls. This is where it is stated the body of the great apostle lies under the high altar, a most beautiful piece of work supported by four great marble pillars inlaid with great slabs of malachite, a rich green copper ore capable of very high polish. The interior is one of the most beautiful that we have seen with the white marble floor, wall and pillars and gilded roof. High up on the wall are oil paintings representing the principal events in the life of St. Paul, and on the cornice are mosaic portraits of the 264 popes from St. Peter to Pius X.

On the return we went through the catacombs of St. Sebastian where St. Peter and St. Paul are said to have been buried and where many christian martyrs found refuge. St. Peter's gives one the impression of immense floor space which is not to be wondered at as it is the largest church in the world. The interior consists of three naves, two transepts and a tribune. The height of Michael Angelo's magnificent dome is 493 feet. Beneath the dome is the grand bronze canopy which covers the papal altar standing on the tomb of St. Peter and in front is the kneeling statue of Pius VI. To the right of the nave is the famous bronze statue of St. Peter and around the walls are the tombs or statues of many of the Popes.

The Vatican, the home of the Pope, is the most splendid palace in the world, has twenty courtyards, eight great staircases two hundred smaller ones and thousands of rooms. We spent a half day in the galleries enjoying the many fine paintings and the Sistine Chapel with its works of art from the brush of Michael Angelo. These consist mainly of the representation of events from the creation to the Deluge and a fresco of the Last Judgment. From here we continue our route south stopping at Cava, Brindisi Eleusio and on to Athens.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

SURELY it is useless to follow the sequel in detail, to tell how Hilda persuaded Thorpe to take her money. To a woman such as she this was not a very difficult task in the long run—a few scruples of pride; that was all.

"I hate to do it," he said. "It doesn't look right."

"You must," she insisted. "I will not take the position of rich wife to a poor man. It is humiliating to both. I will not marry you until you have made your success."

"That is right," said Thorpe heartily. "Well, then, are you going to be so selfish as to keep me waiting while you make an entirely new start, when a little help on my part will bring your plans to completion?"

She saw the shadow of assent in his eyes.

"How much do you need?" she asked swiftly.

"I must take up the notes," he explained. "I must pay the men. I may need something on the stock market. If I go in on this thing I'm going in for keeps. I'll get after those fellows who have been swindling Wallace. Say $100,000."

"Why, it's nothing," she cried.

"I'm glad you think so," he replied grimly.

She ran to her dainty escritoire, where she scribbled eagerly for a few moments.

"There," she cried, her eyes shining—"there is my check book all signed in blank. And I'll see that the money is there."

So it was that Hilda Farrand gave her lover confidence, brought him out from his fastidiousness, launched him afresh into the current of events. He remained in Chicago all that summer, giving orders that all work at the village of Carpenter should cease. With his affairs that summer we have little to do. His common sense treatment of the stock market, by which a policy of quiescence following an outright buying of the stock which he had previously held on margin, retrieved the losses already sustained and finally put both partners on a firm financial footing. That is another story. So, too, is his reconciliation with an understanding of his sister. It came about through Hilda, of course. Perhaps in the inscrutable way of Providence the estrangement was of benefit, even necessary, for it had thrown him entirely within himself during his militant years.

Let us rather look to the end of the summer. It now became a question of reopening the camps. Thorpe wrote to Shearer and Hadway, whom he had retained, that he would arrive on Saturday noon, and suggested that the two begin to look about for men. Friday, himself, Wallace Carpenter, Elizabeth Carpenter, Morton, Helen Thorpe, and Hilda Farrand boarded the north bound train.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

THE train of the South Shore railroad shot its way across the broad reaches of the northern peninsula.

Thorpe welcomed the smell of the northland. He became almost eager, explaining, indulgent to the girl at his side.

"There is the Canada balsam," he cried. "Do you remember how I showed it to you first? And yonder the spruce. How stuck up your teeth were when you tried to chew the gum before it had been heated! Do you remember? Look, look there! It's a white pine! Isn't it a grand tree? It's the finest tree in the forest, by my way of thinking, so tall, so straight, so feathery and so dignified. See, Hilda, look quick! There's an old logging road all filled with raspberries. We'd find lots of partridges there, and perhaps a bear. Wouldn't you like to walk down it about sunset?"

"Yes, Harry."

"I wonder what we're stopping for. Seems to me they are stopping at every squirrel's trail. Oh, this must be Seney. Yes, it is. Queer little place, isn't it, but sort of attractive? Good deal like our town. You have never seen Carpenter, have you? Location's fine anyway, and to me it's sort of picturesque. You'll like Mrs. Hathaway. She's a buxom, motherly woman who runs the boarding house for eighty men and still finds time to mend my clothes for me. And you'll like Solly. Solly's the tug captain, a mighty good fellow, true as a gun barrel. We'll have him take us out some still day. We'll be there in a few minutes now. See the cranberry marshes. Sometimes there's a good deal of pine on little islands scattered over it, but it's very hard to log unless you get a good winter. We had just such a proposition when I worked for Hadway. Oh, you'll like Hadway. He's as good as gold. Helen!"

"Yes, Harry."

Good deal like our town. You have never seen Carpenter, have you? Location's fine anyway, and to me it's sort of picturesque. You'll like Mrs. Hathaway. She's a buxom, motherly woman who runs the boarding house for eighty men and still finds time to mend my clothes for me. And you'll like Solly. Solly's the tug captain, a mighty good fellow, true as a gun barrel. We'll have him take us out some still day. We'll be there in a few minutes now. See the cranberry marshes. Sometimes there's a good deal of pine on little islands scattered over it, but it's very hard to log unless you get a good winter. We had just such a proposition when I worked for Hadway. Oh, you'll like Hadway. He's as good as gold. Helen!"

"Yes, Harry."

"What?" they all asked, breathless. "It's gone. Over beyond the hills there I caught a glimpse of Superior." "You are ridiculous, Harry," protested Helen Thorpe laughingly. "I never saw you so. You are a regular boy."

"Do you like boys?" he asked gravely of Hilda.

"Adore them!" she cried.

"All right; I don't care," he answered his sister in triumph.

The air brakes began to make themselves felt, and shortly the train came to a grinding stop.

"What station is this?" Thorpe asked the colored porter.

"Shingleville, sah," the latter replied.

"I thought so, Wallace, when did their mill burn, anyway? I haven't heard about it."

"Last spring, about the time you went down."

"Is that so? How did it happen?"

"They claim incendiarism," parried Wallace cautiously.

Thorpe pondered a moment, then laughed. "I am in the mixed attitude of the small boy," he observed, "who isn't wicked enough to wish anybody's property destroyed, but who wishes that if there is a fire, to be where he can see it. I am sorry those fellows had to lose their mill, but it was a good thing for us. The man who set that fire did us a good turn. If it hadn't been for the burning of their mill they would have made a stronger fight against us in the stock market."

Wallace and Hilda exchanged glances. The girl was long since aware of the inside history of those days.

"You'll have to tell them that," she whispered over the back of her seat.

"It will please them."

"Our station is next!" cried Thorpe.

"and it's only a little ways. Come, get ready!"

They all crowded into the narrow passageway near the door, for the train barely paused.

"All right, sah," said the porter, swinging down his little step.

Thorpe ran down to help the ladies. He was nearly taken from his feet by a wildcat yell, and a moment later that result was actually accomplished by a rush of men that tossed him bodily on to his shoulders. At the same moment the mill and tug whistles began to screech and miscellaneous firearms exploded. Even the locomotive engineer, in the spirit of the occasion, leaned down heartily on his whistle rope. The sawdust street was filled with screaming, jostling men. The homes of the town were brilliantly draped with cheesecloth, flags and bunting.

For a moment Thorpe could not make out what had happened. This turmoil was so different from the dead quiet of desertion he had expected that he was unable to gather his faculties. All about him were familiar faces upturned to his own. He distinguished the broad, square shoulders of Scotty Parsons, Jack Hyland, Kerle, Bryan Moloney; Billy Camp, the fat and shiny drive cook; Mason, the foreman of the mill; over beyond howled Solly, the tug captain; Rollway Charley, Shorty, the chore boy; everywhere were features that he knew.

As his dimming eyes traveled here and there, one by one the Fighting Forty, the best crew of men ever gathered in the northland, impressed themselves in his consciousness. On the outskirts sauntered the tall form of Tim Shearer, a straw peeping from beneath his flax white mustache, his eyes glimmering under his flax white eyebrows.

Big Junko and Anderson deposited their burden on the raised platform of the office steps. Thorpe turned and frowned the crowd.

At once pandemonium broke loose, as though the previous performance had been nothing but a low voiced rehearsal.

"Oh, aren't you proud of him?" gasped Hilda, squeezing Helen's arm with a little sob.

In a moment Wallace Carpenter, his countenance glowing with pride and pleasure, mounted the platform and stood beside his friend, while Morton and the two young ladies stopped half way up the steps.

At once the racket ceased. Every one stood at attention.

"Mr. Thorpe," Wallace began, "at the request of your friends here, I have a most pleasant duty to fulfill. They have asked me to tell you how glad they are to see you. That is surely unnecessary. They have also asked me to congratulate you on having won the fight with our rivals."

"You done 'em good!" "Can't down the old fellow!" muttered joyous voices.

"But," said Wallace, "I think that I first have a story to tell on my own account."

"At the time the jam broke this spring we owed the men here for a year's work. At that time I considered their demand for wages ill timed and grasping. I wish to apologize. After the money was paid them, instead of scattering, they set to work under Jack Hadway. They have worked long hours all summer. They have invested every cent of their year's earnings in supplies and tools, and now they are prepared to show you in the company's booms 3,000,000 feet of logs rescued by their grit and hard labor from total loss."

At this point the speaker was interrupted. "Saw off!" "Shut up!" "Give us a rest!" replied the audience. "Three million feet ain't worth talkin' about!"

"You make me tired!" "Say your little say the way you oughter!" "Found purty high two millions pocketed on Mure's Island, or we wouldn't 'a' had that much!" "Fool's undertaking, anyhow!"

"Men," cried Thorpe, "I have been very fortunate. From failure success has come. But never have I been more fortunate than in my friends. The firm is now on its feet. It could afford to lose three times the logs it lost this year."

He paused and scanned their faces.

"Men," cried Thorpe.

"But," he continued suddenly, "it cannot now or ever can afford to lose what those 3,000,000 feet represent—the friends it has made. I can pay you back the money you have spent and the time you have put in!" Again he looked them over, and then for the first time since they had known him his face lighted up with a rare and tender smile of affection. "But, comrades, I shall not offer to do it. The gift is accepted in the spirit with which it was offered."

He got no further. The air was rent with sound. Even the members of his own party cheered. From every direction the crowd surged inward. The women and Morton were forced up the platform to Thorpe. The latter motioned for silence.

"Now, boys, we have done it," said he, "and so will go back to work. From now on you are my comrades in the fight."

His eyes were dim, his breast heaved, his voice shook. Hilda was weeping from excitement. Through the tears she saw them all looking at their leader, and in the worn, hard faces glowed the affection and admiration of a dog for its master. Something there was especially touching in this, for strong men rarely show it. She felt a great wave of excitement sweep over her. Instantly she was standing by Thorpe.

"Oh!" she cried, stretching her arms out to them passionately. "Oh, I love you. I love you all!"

THE END.

THE MAGNOLIA.

In the Himalayas Are Found the Most Magnificent Specimens.

The magnolia, so culled from Pierre Magnol, professor of botany at Montpellier in the seventeenth century, is a genus embracing fourteen species of remarkably handsome shrubs deliciously scented and far more hardy than is commonly supposed. They are very widely distributed in China, Japan and the Himalayas and in Mexico and the United States.

The old world species seem to have been the earliest cultivated. The Chinese preserving the buds as well as using them medicinally and to season their rice. The purple flowered Japanese plant was discovered by Kämpfer in 1690 and introduced into England in 1700. The Himalayas possess three varieties, among them the most magnificent of all, Magnolia Campbellii, a conspicuous object in the scenery of Darjeeling, eighty feet high, twelve feet in girth, with flowers ten inches across.

North America has given many distinct varieties, among them the cucumber or umbrella tree, the beaver tree and the favorite Magnolia grandiflora.

THE SPANISH NOVIQ.

A Gallant Who Rarely Weds the Maiden He Attends.

A Spanish maiden who is in the least attractive is always attended by a young man. He is called her novio, and it is his privilege to accompany her on her walks, though of course always with either her mother or a maid to play propriety. His courtship seldom ends in his becoming engaged to the young lady, but while it lasts she has to be obedient and loyal to him.

If he should transfer his affections to another fair damsel, the slighted one has no redress, for he is quite at liberty to do so, their friendship never being regarded in the light of a formal engagement. Marriages are settled by the heads of the two families chiefly concerned, and until such an arrangement is made the young Spaniard may be novio to as many girls as he likes, one after another. This custom has certainly more advantages for the men than it has for the maidens, but yet few Spanish girls would care to be without a novio, however feeble he might be.

Rare in Patagonia.

A scientist exploring Patagonia says: "The impossibility of Patagonia mud is proverbial. You cannot walk through it, and it takes a sturdy mule to carry you through. More often than not it is caused by the burrowing of a tailless rat known as the tuco tuco. Acres upon acres, amounting to square miles even, of otherwise sound and wholesome ground are undermined by this indefatigable little pest. He holds the country as nothing else holds it until the advent of sheep or cattle which he hates induces him to shift the scene of his nightly labors." Boston Transcript.

TEAS THAT ARE WORTH FORTUNES

Twelve Hundred Kinds Are in China's Show at the World's Fair—The Most Populous Nation of the World For the First Time Makes an Exhibit Worthy of Her Greatness.

Many expositions of stupendous character make up the World's Fair of 1904. Each part is a vast and distinct show. Each building shelters many acres of wonderful things—wonderful because they are the choicest of their kind. Every nation on the globe is represented. Every state and territory is here with its best and making the most of its greatest opportunity.

The fact that China has not been a large exhibitor at world's fairs gives to her great exhibit here a prominence quite exceptional. It is a wonderland of ingenious productions. We know China best by reason of her extensive exports of teas, which have found a vast market in the United States for generations. Her commercial interests therefore prompted her to make a display of teas that we should not forget.

In sealed glass jars China displays in the Liberal Arts Palace some 1,200 kinds of tea. Young Hyson and Old Hyson have a string of tea relations longer than the genealogical chain of a Plymouth Rock. They are neatly selected "chops," in the language of the tea farmer, and these classes do not embrace medicinal teas, which are quite another lot in the rather modest number of 400.

The teas exhibited vary in price from a few cents a pound to some rare and exclusive kinds that are worth their weight in gold. The tea in the latter cases being placed on one side of the scales and pure gold on the other—that is to say, the tea of this expensive kind is worth about $20 gold an ounce. Only a very small quantity of this exclusive leaf is exhibited, and it is grown in carefully guarded tea plantations or gardens right under the shadow of the great wall of China. Its cultivation is prohibited for any use save for the imperial family of China and a few of the favored high officials.

Mention has been made of the word "chop" in connection with tea, and it

With the retirement of Hon. Edwin
R. Hoag of Chelsea from the Government's Council, it is conceded that the nomination belongs to this end of the third district and there is a strong movement on foot in favor of the candidacy of Mr. G. Fred Simpson of this city.

Mr. Simpson is a new comer in political life, but is of the kind of men, that when they could be induced to accept office, this state has hitherto delighted to honor. A native of Maine, Mr. Simpson has resided for thirty years in this city, and as President of the Simpson Bros Corporation has a wide acquaintance among business men all over the state. A successful business man, with ample leisure, high social standing and wide experience, Mr. Simpson would make an admirable member of the Governor's Council.

The efforts of the Boston papers to make a typhoid epidemic out of a few cases reported to the health board,
and to attribute the same to our water supply, are both ridiculous. In the first place the total number of seventeen, is not large for a population of 35,000 and as our water supply is located in a sparsely settled and healthy neighborhood, infection from that source is out of the question.
Half the reported cases are from infection received outside of this city and the remaining cases have received the fullest investigation from our health authorities. The editor of the Graphic has had several years experience in health work in this city and does not hesitate to brand the present rumors as the purest kind of fakes.

Amid the clash and din of state and national politics we hear occasional bits of news regarding plans for the municipal election in December. An important item this week is the positive declaration to continue in office, of Alderman George H. Mellen of Newton Highlands, who has rendered such excellent service during the past four years. Representative men of that ward have succeeded, however,
in obtaining the reluctant consent of Mr. Edward P. Bosson of Hillside road to stand in place of Alderman Mellen. Mr. Bosson is a successful business man, who accepts public office as a matter of duty, and we congratulate the city upon the prospect of securing his services.

We publish this week an interesting article on the brown tail moth, and a pertinent suggestion from a correspondent as to a public meeting. Let the good work continue.

FUNERAL OF I. T. BURR.

The funeral services for the late Isaac T. Burr were of the simplest character and held Saturday afternoon at his late home on Park street.
There was a large attendance of friends and relatives, including representatives from several of the corporations in which the deceased was a director, trustees of the Newton public library and many Boston business men.

The services were held at 2:30 and were conducted by Rev. Adelbert L.
Hudson, pastor of the Channing Unitarian church, of which Mr. Burr was an active member. The pall bearers were the sons of Mr. Burr.
Interment was in the family lot at the Newton cemetery.

DeMeritte School.

Four years ago Mr. Edwin DeMeritte—for many years identified with the success and prosperity of two of the best private schools in Boston—threw off the shackles of a partnership which hampered progress and started a school for boys at 30 Huntington avenue, Boston. From his long experience he brought into the new enterprise a determination to build up a school where manliness and education go hand in hand. He further strengthened his position by associating with him young men, fresh from the college, strong in modern methods and strong in character.
The broad and progressive ideas of the founder, the ability of his associates and their fidelity to their work, the combination of ripe experience and modern methods, have already made it a school strong in numbers, strong in the character of its boys, strong in its educational work and strong in the preparation it gives its boys to fight the battle of life successfully. 21

ENDORSEMENT

BUSINESS MEN

OF TWELFTH DISTRICT.

Captain JOHN W. WEEKS, Ex-Mayor of Newton, of the House of Representatives & Weeks, is a business man in the prime of life who commands the highest respect and esteem of business circles in Boston and New England.

He has had a successful experience in dealing with large affairs in which tact, intelligence, and executive ability of a high order have been shown. His judgment, reliability, integrity and business sagacity have been tried and proved.

He is the type of citizen wanted in places of trust, requiring strength of character, fixity of purpose, breadth of view and intellectual capacity.

The undersigned do not hesitate to commend Captain Weeks
as a candidate eminently well qualified to represent in Congress
the voters of the Twelfth District.

WILLIAM I. HOWELL.

Finding that many of the friends of the late William I. Howell have not heard of his death, the following notice is fitting. Mr. Howell had made Boston his home for many years, first as a student and later as a teacher of piano and organ.

His health was never robust, but he was most industrious and faithful in all his work and accomplished much more than many of stronger constitution. He held the position of organist and choir director in several churches and always with great acceptance. He was at the First Church, Newton Centre, for eight years, going from there to Brockton as the old Newton Church was demolished and a new one erected. His health was failing during the past year, but so gradually that it was hard to realize it, as he kept steadily on with his piano and organ work to the last. Early in June he went to Ottawa, Canada, to be under the care of Dr. McLaren, his brother in law. But it was too late and he died June 13th in his 50th year. He was a very successful teacher and an excellent musician.

Letter to A. J. Steadman, West Newton.

Dear Sir: Clothing is just like paint; it fits or it doesn't; it wears or it doesn't; turns weather and water or not; and goes out of fashion.

What do we wear clothes for? Did you ever think of it? Different persons have different reasons, no doubt, but one points Devoe for beauty, to be in the fashion, and keep-out water. Fashion says paint: we all paint. There is beauty in paint; we paint a good deal for that. And buildings are costly and fashionable; put-on a waterproof two or three coats of paint, and your buildings last as long as you keep them dry. It costs nothing to paint; it costs your buildings not to.

Devoe is the paint that lasts; disappointing paints are the paints that cost.

Yours truly
J. M. Briggs and Son sell our paint.

Mr. Curtis Dead.

Residents of Newton Lower Falls and vicinity will be interested to learn of the death, at Newark, Delaware, on the 17th ult. of Solomon Minot Curtis.

Mr. Curtis was the son of Solomon and Hannah Curtis, and was born in Newton Lower Falls, in 1818. He was the last of nine brothers, of whom Allen C. and William were the oldest two, and all were noted paper manufacturers, A. C. and W. as the firm was called, having imported the first Fourdrinier machine brought to this country. After having been engaged in manufacturing paper in Lower Falls and in New York for a number of years, he removed to Newark, Delaware, where he continued the business, and retired in 1884.

Mr. Curtis was prominent in political matters in his adopted state, and held several offices of high trust, and also took great interest in educational work.

He was also widely known as a member and worker of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and in addition to holding many other positions, was for fifty years a lay delegate to the general convention.

He was married Sept. 5th 1844 to Miss Adeline H. Hurd, a daughter of William Hurd, an old time paper maker in Newton, and is survived by his widow, and son and daughter.

Miss Elliott Engaged.

At a dainty little party given by Miss Elsie Elliott of Maple street last Saturday evening to a few college friends, her engagement to Mr. Archibald A. Roff of Cohoes, N. Y. was announced. Miss Elliott, who is a graduate of the Newton High School, is now a student at Smith, and the fortunate young man is a graduate of Harvard '03.

The decorations at the house were composed of the white of Smith and the crimson of Harvard, the hand-painted plate cards having white and crimson flags crossed. The young people are receiving many congratulations on their engagement.

MISS COBB DEAD.

The death of Miss Susie E. Cobb, the daughter of Mr. Edward W. Cobb of Hyde avenue occurred last Saturday after a long illness. The cause of death being locomotor ataxia. Miss Cobb was born in Nantucket, but has lived in Newton for the last 32 years.

Funeral services were held at the Cobb residence Monday morning at 1:45 conducted by Rev. Dr. Calkins, and the interment was at Nantucket.

than is the gypsy moth or elm leaf beetle. To secure best results spraying should be done as soon as the foliage develops in the spring. Five pounds of the arsenate of lead paste to one hundred gallons of water is sufficient, or, if preferred, one pound of good Paris green kept well stirred may be applied in one hundred and fifty gallons of water.

"Where the caterpillars swarm from trees along fences or on house walls the use of kerosene emulsion or strong soap suds is advisable. Fall spraying with arsenate of lead is also effective, but the feeding of the caterpillars at that time of the year is usually of minor importance.

Little good can be done in the way of collecting the eggs or trapping the moths by light, although many of the mature insects are destroyed by arc lamps. There is no method of combating the brown-tail moths that will give better results for the outlay than the destruction of the webs in the winter season, and thus if thoroughly carried out will be a sufficient protection against damage by the insect. Cases will rise where the caterpillars swarm from adjoining estates, and where this occurs banding the trees with some sticky material as heretofore described will protect the foliage from harm.

"Both the gypsy and brown-tail moths can be controlled by a thorough campaign over the infested municipalities. The work of the former gypsy moth committee has shown that the damage and annoyance of thorough remedial measures over the entire infested district. It is greatly to be hoped that some effort to systematically control the spread of these pests may be instituted, to the end that property owners may be spared the annual visitation of the caterpillar scourge."—Boston Transcript.

At the Theatres

Coming Attractions

Majestic Theatre—At the Majestic Theatre, Lawrence D'Orsay and "The Earl of Pawtucket" have again demonstrated by the size and enthusiasm of the audiences that have been in evidence during their return week, that this Augustus Thomas comedy is as well liked in Boston as in the other big cities that have seen it, and the genuine success of its local engagement is no longer a matter for doubt. In fact the management of the Majestic only regrets that it will be impossible to keep the play here longer than the coming week. Augustus Thomas wrote this play with Lawrence D'Orsay as his model for the central figure and the actor has only to be himself and the hit is made. Matinees are played on Wednesday and Saturday of next week, the last of the engagement.

Tremont Theatre—Boston has never had a more pronounced theatrical success than the new Ade-Luders' opera, "The Sho-Gun," which began its third week at the Tremont Monday evening. Since the opening night the theatre has been packed at every performance, and the enthusiasm of the audiences leaves no room for doubt as to the popular success of this attraction. "The Sho-Gun" is conceded to be the most magnificently mounted production that Henry W. Savage ever has offered Boston playgoers, and the piece is sure to enjoy unlimited prosperity throughout the remainder of its engagement. George Ade's bright, witty, satirical lines seem even better after hearing them two or three times. The work he has done in the new opera is of the sort that will live, and the public evidently appreciates the efforts of everyone connected with the attraction to make it touch a higher artistic plane than is common in the musical entertainments of today. Gustav Luders' music is conceded to be the best he has written. The score is tuneful throughout and a number of his ensembles, particularly the one in the finale of the first act, are stirring and inspiring. Boston has never seen prettier stage pictures and groupings than George Marion, Mr. Savage's general stage director, has arranged in the new opera. Announcement comes from the Tremont that the engagement of "The Sho-Gun" is a limited one.

Grand Opera House—Among the most notable of the leading dramatic attractions which are to be seen in Boston in the near future will be David Belasco's remarkably successful war play "The Heart of Maryland." It will be seen at the Grand Opera House next week. There are plays and plays; their variety as great as their pretensions are infinite. Of all that have been brought forward, David Belasco's "The Heart of Maryland," has achieved the most enduring and brilliant success: a success and fame almost unprecedented in modern dramatic annals. It is a sort of dramatic art that deserves the popular and critical recognition by which it was so long welcomed throughout. Matinees will be given as usual on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Keith's Theatre—The chief item of note in connection with the Keith vaudeville for the week of Sept. 12 is the announcement that it will bring to a close the long and successful summer engagement of the Fallettes woman's orchestra. For the last week a program of selections from the most popular music played during the last five months will be given. It is understood that the numerous friends and admirers of the orchestra are preparing to give them a "send off" similar to that which marked the closing week last season. The surrounding variety bill includes: Fred Herbert's troupe of dogs, just over from Europe; Brandow and Wiley, a couple of lively "real coon" comedians, singers and dancers; Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Crane, in their farcical sketch, "Am I Your Wife," one of the best things of the kind done in vaudeville; Rice and Prevost, two of the cleverest and most amusing acrobatic comedians in America, and the famous Sandor trio of acrobats. Charles Hawtre, the noted English actor, is underlined for the week of Sept. 19th.

TREMONT THEATRE.

Henry W. Savage will spare no expense to make his production of "Parsifal" an exact reproduction of the manner in which Wagner's festival play is presented at Bayreuth. On account of the length of the performance, and in order to give the music-drama without any cuts it was found advisable to arrange a special schedule for each act. Following the example of Bayreuth, Mr. Savage announces that the performance of "Parsifal" will begin promptly at 5:30 in the afternoon. The first act, which is the longest of the three will require one hour and forty-five minutes, and there will be an intermission of one hour and fifteen minutes for dinner. The second act will begin promptly at 8:30 p. m. and will end at 9:35 p. m. After an intermission of twenty minutes the third and last act will begin at 9:55 p. m. and the performance will be brought to a close at 10:55.

It is Mr. Savage's intention to give "Parsifal" in its entirety, and to reproduce as closely as possible the reverential atmosphere which is such an essential part of the performances at the Festival Theatre at Bayreuth. For this purpose he sent his scenic artist abroad last summer to study the original production and to copy the models of the scenery, as well as the designs for the costumes. The artists he has engaged are among the best known in England.

"The entire production of 'Parsifal' will be under the supervision of Joseph Engel, for many years the artistic director of the Stadt Theatre at Strassburg. There will be a chorus of fifty and an enlarged orchestra of sixty musicians. In all the cities in which 'Parsifal' is presented arrangements will be made to provide a special dinner to be served during the intermission between the first and second acts of the music drama. Mr. Savage has planned to give matinees, beginning at 11 in the morning. The first performance of 'Parsifal' in English will be given in Boston at the Tremont Theatre, October 17, and an engagement of six weeks in New York will follow.

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

Wright Lorimer will begin a six weeks' engagement at the Majestic Theatre, Boston, on Monday, October 3rd, in the much discussed Biblical romantic drama, "The Shepherd King." This is said to be the largest and most beautiful theatrical production ever made, no less than eight cars being required to transport company and production.

The drama deals with the career of young David from the time he was tending the flocks until he became king, and never fails to be interesting in unfolding the marvelous rise of David and the gradual undoing of Saul.

Scenically and sartorially "The Shepherd King" is of marvelous beauty. The first act shows the home of David, the shepherd boy, near Bethlehem; the second act, the camp of Saul in the Vale of Elah; the third, the palace of Saul at Gibeah; and the fourth, which is in two scenes, the cave of the Witch of Endor, and a court adjoining the palace at Gibeah.

Mr. Lorimer's company numbers upwards of two hundred people, among whom are many distinguished actors.

CHICKERING HALL.

No preliminary announcement in years has aroused such great interest as the production of "Beyond," the remarkable drama of the soul, which will be seen for the first time on any stage at Chickering Hall in Boston, beginning Sept. 29th. Critics and judges who have examined the work pronounce it of the most extraordinary merit, and predict for it a world wide success. Already arrangements have been made for the production of "Beyond" in England, France, Germany, Italy and Australia, in addition to America. "Beyond" is entirely different from anything that has ever before been presented to the public, and deals with the life to come in a way that is not offensive to the most sensitive religious scruple. The drama tells the story of the soul's flight, and has for its central figure the weird personality of Edgar Allan Poe who meets in the distant Aiden the beloved Lenore whom he has immortalized in "The Raven." No words can depict the beauties of "Beyond," which baffles all description, and must be seen to be properly appreciated. It will undoubtedly draw great crowds during its stay in Boston, where during the run at Chickering Hall matinees will be given Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday of each week.

Golf.

At the Albemarle links last Saturday E. J. Cox's team defeated that of F. W. Amidon, 20½ to 9½.

At Newton Centre, Saturday Dwight Chester's team defeated C. A. Hibbard's by a score of 6 to 4.

At Brae Burn, Saturday, team 1, J. D. Greene, captain, defeated team 2, H. Baily captain, 9 to 6.

Mr. Travelli and the two Gilmer are playing in the Baltersrol tournament this week for the Brae Burn Club.

The qualification round for the September cups of the Brae-Burn Country Club was played Saturday. Qualification was 18 holes (scratch), players qualifying for match play from scratch, in classes of eight. The finals in each class must be played on or before Sept. 30. The lowest score was made by W. Holmes Cady, with 85, O. F. Herrick being second with 86. The scores:

W. H. Cady 85, O. F. Herrick 86, N. E. Paine 89, H. Bailey 89, S. A. Shannon 91, H. C. O'Brien 91, A. J. Newell 91, A. L. Squier 92, W. B. Herrick 92, J. W. Sprague 93, D. Chichester 94, W. Peters 104, E. E. Davidson 106, A. B. Cobb 109, W. H. Holbrook 110, E. C. Adams 115, F. N. Perkins, 116, F. W. Davis 117, J. P. Gray 117, E. W. Lincoln 117.

At the Woodland Golf Club Saturday there was a handicap vs. Bogey, which was won by Alfred Howard with a score of 2 up. Sidney Smith and Dr. F. M. Donnell tied for second place, each making 1 up.

At the Woodland Golf Club on Labor Day the qualifying round for the autumn cup was played. Qualification was 18 holes, medal play, handicap, the best 18 net scores qualifying for match play. The first round at match play must be completed on or before Sept. 10, the second round on or before Sept. 17, the semi-finals on or before Sept. 24 and the finals on or before Oct. 1. P. F. O'Donnell made both best gross and best net score of 80 and 74 respectively in Tuesday's play.

At the Albemarle Golf Club Monday the holiday event was a 27 hole handicap, medal play, tournament, best nine holes selected, one third handicap being allowed. E. J. Cox made the best net score of 31. A. L. Wakefield and C. E. Harrington trying for second place with 32 each.

At the Newton Highlands Golf Club Monday morning, there was a handicap stroke competition for the Governor's cup, presented to the club by G. H. Mellen, R. R. Tarbell, P. E. Levi, E. E. Bird and B. W. Goddard. The trophy was won by Dr. F. E. Withee, who, with a handicap of 34, made the best net score of 73. B. Walter Goddard captured the prize for the best gross score with 89.

FARMERS' MONTH AT WORLD'S FAIR

Biggest Department of the Great Exposition Ready For the Inspection of the Army of Men Who Made Its Creation Possible.

Now that crops have been or are being laid by, the farmer prepares for his trip to the World's Fair, a treat that has long been promised him and for which he has patiently waited. No exposition has offered so many inducements for the farmer's presence as this one at St. Louis, nor has any previous exposition given the prominence and space to the subject of agriculture.

August and September are ostensibly the farmer's months at the Exposition, for it is at this season that the agriculture exhibits are the freshest and best. Products of the new crops are pouring into the booths from every state in the Union, and additions are constantly being made to the gorgeous display.

Headquarters for visiting farmers may be found in every state section of the great Agriculture Palace, but for their special convenience there has just been completed a Grange House, situated in the south end of the building. It is equipped with a reception room, ladies' retiring rooms and check rooms, where parcels may be left free of charge. Here will be kept a list of moderate priced rooms to aid visiting farmers and their families in procuring accommodations.

The largest building on the grounds is the Palace of Agriculture, covering twenty acres, while the Palace of Horticulture near by covers about a third as much space. These two immense structures are filled with exhibits of the farm, garden and orchard of the most extensive and elaborate character, every state in the Union and most of the principal countries of the world being represented.

Agriculture is given more prominence than any other department at the Exposition, the paramount importance of this great industry having been fully appreciated from the very beginning of the World's Fair movement.

About seventy acres of ground are covered by the agriculture and horticulture department at the Fair, large outdoor spaces being devoted to this industry. Outside there are growing crops, trees and flowers, an instructive six acre farm maintained by the United States Government Plant Industry, and gardens in all parts of the grounds.

There are more exhibits in the Agriculture building than in any other section of the Exposition. This building is considered by many people the most interesting part of the World's Fair. The exhibits in the palaces of Agriculture and Horticulture constitute a display vast enough and instructive enough to occupy the attention of visitors for many days. Nothing to compare with them was ever attempted before. They are the climax of several decades of educational work which is placing farming on a high plane and is making scientific agriculture a pleasing reality.

The conspicuous role played by agriculture at the World's Fair should bring untold benefits and wealth to the farming community of the world and impress all farmers with the importance and dignity of their calling.

Passing through these colossal buildings, studying the attractive exhibits and fascinated with the bewildering encyclopaedia of rural life which is spread out before his eyes, the World's Fair visitor is impressed with the important part the farmer plays in the great world of industry, and every farmer who views these interesting exhibits is given a new pride in his vocation if filled with inspiration and impressed with new ideas in harmony with the progressive strides that farming has been making for the past few years. The visit will give an insight into up to date farming on the most approved plan and will bring new hopes and blessings to the farm.

How properly to rotate crops, how to get the best results from fertilizing and irrigation, how to protect crops and fruit from the ravages of insects—all these and many more things of vital interest to farmers and fruit growers are taught at the World's Fair.

Norumbega Park

Norumbega Park—The first week in September at Norumbega Park opened gloriously with a big Sunday attendance followed by immense crowds who chose to celebrate Labor Day among the rustic beauties and the amusements and attractions of this picturesque resort on the beautiful Charles. Some of the special features that were provided for the holiday were band concerts all day and evening in music court by the Boston American band. According to the present indications the month of September promises to be one of the best of the entire season, for whereas in previous summers at this amusement place the week beginning with Labor Day has practically seen the end of the attractions there the indications now are that Norumbega Park will remain open with its full complement of attractions much longer than usual. Next week there will be a complete change of bill.

THE PLAYHOUSE.

Park Theatre—Boston's theatrical season has started out with a most emphatic comedy triumph and at the Park Theatre Ezra Kendall is testing the capacity nightly with his latest and best success entitled "Weather-beaten Benson." To say that this is funnier and more delightful in every respect than "The Vinegar Buyer" is warm praise, but that seems to be the verdict of every theatregoer who has witnessed the production since it was first seen here on Labor Day. Mr. Kendall has taken a long step forward with his newest impersonation and by general consensus of opinion is now fully entitled to the position on the American stage which has never been filled since the death of the late Sol Smith Russell. Liebler and Co have staged "Weatherbeaten Benson" with great liberality and the scenes are wonderfully picturesque and carry the spectator to the region in the Indian Territory where flowers abound and where all nature is especially charming.

Police Paragraphs.

Samuel Rosen, a Newton Upper Falls groceryman, recently found guilty of keeping and exposing liquor, and who appealed from a $50 fine, called at the court Saturday and paid it.

John A. Driscoll was charged with being drunk at Chestnut Hill and fined $15. He had fallen from his wagon.

DROWNING ACCIDENT.

The waters of Charles River claimed their fifth victim on Wednesday evening, when Frank Campbell of Waltham, was drowned near the Waltham Canoe Club house. No one seems to know just how the accident happened owing to the darkness of the night. About 8 several canoeists heard a splash and then cries for aid. Immediately a large crowd gathered around the capsized canoe but no trace of the unfortunate was found. The park police were notified and recovered the body shortly after 9. The deceased was a member of the Waltham Canoe Club and was employed at the Waltham Watch Factory. The police notified his parents who live in Lowell and the body was forwarded to his old home.

A Most Desirable School for Young Children.

We wish to call the attention of parents to the "Newton Kindergarten and Froebel School" conducted by Mrs. Sweetser and her sister, Miss Williams, at an attractive school building on Austin St., West Newton.

Our testimony as to its high character and usefulness is unhesitating and is given solely from our interest in the school, the result of the benefits which we think our own children have received.

Beginning with the Kindergarten, the advanced courses cover the full preparation for the High School. Small classes under the same teachers for several years give the best possible conditions for the individual development and progress of the child. The teachers, of whom there are a large number in proportion to the number of scholars, become thoroughly acquainted with and interested in their pupils and are able to carry out continuous plans for their development, without the loss of time common with more frequent change of teachers.

And most important of all, we appreciate highly the natural talent for the work and the quiet helpful influence over the young children possessed by Mrs. Sweetser and Miss Williams.

We do not believe a better Kindergarten exists in the country and we most heartily recommend it.

Signatures JOHN W. WESSER, HENRY B. PAY, JAMES R. CARTER.

Descriptive pamphlet will be sent on application to Mrs. Sweetser or without doubt she would gladly call on any parent who wished to consult her or get further information.

At 9:06 p. m. the board adjourned until Oct. 3rd at 7:45 p. m.

Y. M. C. A.

The Board of Directors of the Newton Y. M. C. A., has engaged Mr. Louis F. LaRose as Physical Director, for the coming year. Mr. LaRose is well qualified by study and experience, to conduct the physical work of the Association, having studied at the Chicago Training School, and held the position of Asst. Physical Director at Central Dep't, Chicago, for two years.

There will be classes for Business Men, Young Men, and Boys, at convenient hours. The system taught, will be that devised by Mr. Ehler, physical director of Chicago for a long time, but who has now accepted the position of Director of Physical Culture of the Public Schools of Cleveland. Gymnasium classes begin October 1st. The game and social rooms will be more attractive than ever. Socials, entertainments, and practical talks will be held frequently during the season. After Nov. 1st, meetings for men will be held on Sunday afternoons. Bible classes will be organized, open to all young men, whether members or not.

Mr. Hartvig Nissen, director of Physical Training in the Brookline public schools is one of the pioneers of the medical Gymnastics and massage treatment in the United States and has practised about thirty years in this country and in Europe. He was established in Washington, D. C., between 1883 and 1891, when he was called to Boston to introduce Swedish Gymnastics into the public schools there, and in 1900, he accepted the position as Director of Physical Training in Brookline schools. Between 1886 and 1889, he was Instructor of Physical Training at the Johns Hopkins University; between 1891 and 1895, Instructor in Wellesley College and has been Instructor in Swedish Gymnastics and Massage at Harvard University Summer school ever since 1891.

Hundreds of Mr. Nissen's pupils are now practising with great success, and a vast number of ladies and gentlemen have testified to his personal skill both as a teacher and a practitioner. Among others are: the late Presidents of the United States, Gen. U. S. Grant, and Gen. Benj. Harrison; the late Hon. James G. Blaine; the Secretary of State, Hon. John Hay, and nearly all the members of the Presidents' Cabinets and the foreign diplomats in Washington between 1883 and 1891. Mr. Nissen is located in the Warren Chambers, 419 Boylston street, Boston.

New Express Management.

Fifteen local and suburban express companies conducting business within a ten-mile radius of this city, have just been united into one organization known as the Boston and Suburban Express and Parcel Companies. The new organization is a voluntary association having a capitalization of $500,000. The officers are: President, Edward P. Shaw; vice president, A. A. Rothenberg; treasurer Samuel J. Shaw and secretary William R. Buckminster.

Headquarters for the big company will be established at once in the five buildings bounded by Broad, Battery-march and Hamilton streets. These buildings are seven stories in height and contain 70,000 square feet of floor space.

A system will be put into operation at once by the combination which will expedite the despatch of all express matter to and from outlying districts as well as in the city proper. The company has not been formed with a view of bringing about competition with existing express interests. The various expresses of the combination conducting business in the suburban districts will not have their present system disturbed, and will be operated under the existing names. Gradually, however, as the public gets accustomed to the new system, changes will be made in the several companies so that they may work in harmony with the changes to take place in the Boston system.

The plans of the new company provide for the immediate introduction of an entirely new system in the business district of Boston, which will bring about much quicker delivery and collection than the individual companies have been able to give the merchants depending upon them for the transportation of goods. The downtown section of the city has been divided off into districts and a large modern-equipped wagon will be assigned to each that will be at work constantly picking up and delivering express matter. These city wagons at the beginning of the adoption of the new system will receive from the merchants all express packages for all places within the ten-mile radius. As the merchants become better acquainted with the system, arrangements will be made with the farther outlying companies to transfer the goods into their sections. Just as soon as the city wagons have completed the rounds of their separate districts they will proceed to the main headquarters, which will act as a clearing office, and upon depositing the loads, will proceed to fill up with express matter brought from other points. The system also provides for the sale of stamps which may be purchased in any sized quantities by merchants or other persons desiring to despatch express matter. Stations will be established at convenient places where express packages may be left in safety until a wagon makes its rounds for collection.

Three Newton expresses are included in this combination, Newcomb's of Newton, Eames' of Newton Centre and Shelton's of Auburndale. Mr. Newcomb remains the manager of his line and will probably have charge of the entire Newton district.

The new arrangement went into effect September 1st.

Clubs and Lodges

Mt. Ida Council Royal Arcanum held a G. A. R. night Monday at Dennison Hall, Newtonville. There was a full attendance and Hon. John W. Weeks made an interesting address on the Japanese-Russian war, followed by Col. A. M. Benson of Dorchester who gave some reminiscences of his war experiences. The affair was managed by Harry D. Cabot, Joseph B. Robinson, Edward W. Bailey and Samuel J. Spear.

September A Delightful Month in the Mountains—Low Rates via Boston & Maine R. R.

The fall is the ideal time of the year for a visit to the White Mountains. The forests are rich in their beautiful autumnal mantle; and the sharp brist, invigorating quality of the mountain atmosphere infuses one with life. The usual apathy of summer is lost, and one feels more inclined to ramble and stroll to the numerous haunts and walks in this great natural Park.

The wonders of the mountains are many and the scenic vistas are rare and handsome. At Intervale is the beautiful verdant valley leading to the domed shaped summits of Big Thon, Little Thon and Baby Thon mountains; while away in the distance are the towering peaks of Mt. Washington, Jefferson and Madison. Mt. Washington, the grand observatory of the mountain region with its novel incline railroad invites the traveler to make an ascension; while the natural wonders of the Profile, Franconia and Crawford Notches are beyond description.

From September 15th to October 8th, the Boston and Maine Railroad will have tickets on sale at greatly reduced rates to all White Mountain points. Side trips will be on sale in the mountains at low rates; and the hotel proprietors will make special low rates for the fall tourists. For rates, etc., see Boston and Maine posters, or send to the General Passenger Department, Boston and Maine Railroad, Boston.

There is quite a wonderful work of rejuvenation going on in the old Massachusetts club which has already passed the attention of most of the politicians. The Massachusetts club is one of the dearest old organizations in the entire state. It is comprised in the main of gentlemen who are not less than 100 years old and who are able to remember back about 200 years. It has been of about as much use to the republican party as a clucking hen in the roadway is to an automobile.

Within a short period of time there has been an influx of new blood—good republican blood—and it will not be surprising if within a reasonable space of time it will be found to have evolved into a real republican organization willing and anxious to have some say in political periods a little bit this side of Shea's rebellion. It takes hard work but there are to be found in the ranks some young enthusiasts who are big enough and brave enough to do this very thing.—Practical Politics.

The credit for this good work belongs to a large degree to Mr. W. F. Garcelon of this city.

In the issue of Among the Clouds for Sept. 8 published on top of Mt. Washington is the following interesting item regarding a Newton resident.

"Mr. E. R. Burbank of Boston was here last night for the third time this season, this being the twenty-fifth night he had spent on the mountain. His first ascent was made in 1892, when he became separated from a party in Tuckerman's Ravine, lost the path and scaled the cliff at the right of the snow arch, reaching the Summit House at last by a direct ascent over the rocks. His friends came an hour or so later in great anxiety, only to find him enjoying a comfortable rest by the office stove. In spite of his hard climb he walked to the Glen and a mile beyond the same night to rejoin his carriage. Mr. Burbank was supposed to be keeping quiet that summer, under medical advice, and when he wrote his doctor about the climb the latter wrote back: 'If this is inaction, what would you call action?' Since that time he has walked up Mount Washington six times, to say nothing of Lafayette, Cannon and Starr King. He has also walked three times over the Northern Peaks, the last time a few weeks ago, with Mr. W. W. Hart.

Third District Councillor

Lunch and Conference.

At an informal lunch and conference Saturday afternoon at Young's Hotel, which was attended by a large and representative gathering of influential Republicans, the candidacy of Mr. G. Fred Simpson of Newton for the nomination for councillor in the third district was enthusiastically endorsed and a rallying committee of 100 appointed.

Hon. E. L. Pickard of Newton presided and speeches advocating Mr. Simpson's nomination were made by Congressman Powers, ex-senator John M. Parry and ex-senator A. S. Apsey of Cambridge, Chas. V. Blanchard chairman city committee of Somerville, Alderman William Davis, Chairman city committee of Cambridge and Geo. H. Dunham of Chelsea of the State committee.

Among the Newton gentlemen present were Mayor Weed, Aldermen Johnson and Barber, Hon. E. B. Wilson, E. T. Colburn, Mitchell Wing, F. W. Stone, F. J. Hale, H. W. Kendall, ex-aldermen J. F. Lothrop, O. M. Fisher, Col. D. W. Farquhar, W. H. Emerson, L. E. Coffin, E. T. Fearing, Samuel Farquhar, J. F. Ryder, M. B. Jones, G. P. Pote, W. O. Delano, W. F. Hadlock, J. T. Langford, C. T. Pulsifer, S. W. Tucker, W. S. Edmonds, together with Samuel W. Bailey, W. H. Joyce, Maj. J. C. Chappelle, James Grant, John Hertach, Frank Maron, John Nelson, Lester B. Harlow, of Cambridge, John Given, Sewell M. Rich, J. S. Newcomb, W. S. Glidden, G. L. Marshall, W. P. Jones, Frank Richardson, J. N. Pratt, C. A. Daniels, President J. S. Pike of the board of aldermen, C. S. Soule, W. H. Woodberry, O. H. Coddington, E. W. Woodley, G. R. Ljby, R. S. Wright of Somerville, Lorenzo Dixon and C. H. Wilkinson of Chelsea, Representative Thayer of Ashland and others.

NOT A COUNTY QUESTION AT ALL.

The argument has been advanced and reiterated through the district press that the congressional candidate should be selected from Norfolk county because there are at present four members of congress who reside in Middlesex county, and no Norfolk county resident has the same honor.

The four Middlesex county congressmen are Messrs. Tirrell, Roberts, McCall and Powers, and these representatives from the 4th, 7th, 8th and 12th districts respectively, represent the more than 800,000 people living in those districts regardless of county lines, and the claim that Norfolk county, as a county, is misrepresented or unrepresented is absurd, especially in view of the fact that in 1900 Norfolk county had a population of 151,539, while the population of Middlesex county was 565,096. Members of congress have never been selected on the same basis of representation as that on which county commissioners are selected and the determining factor in selecting a member of congress to represent the 200,000 people of the 12th district should not be whether or not he lives on one side or the other of an imaginary line which puts two adjoining municipalities into different counties, but should be solely the personal qualification of the candidate and his fitness for the responsibilities and duties of the position.

No matter whether he lives in Watertown of Middlesex, North Attleboro of Bristol, Braintree of Norfolk or Upton of Worcester, parts of all four of which counties are in the 12th district. The representative selected should be the candidate best qualified for the position, and the voters of the district may be depended upon to act accordingly.

Those who argue on a basis of county representation in the halls of congress will admit that it is Norfolk's loss that Capt. John W. Weeks has not lived for years in one of her smaller towns, but if he had he would not have had the opportunity of successful and commendable experience in municipal administration which his five years' service as alderman and mayor of the city of Newton has given him.

Had Capt. Weeks grown up and worked on a Norfolk county farm it would be greatly to his credit, but he would probably have lost the chance of an education in the United States Naval academy followed by service in the United States navy, still further by 10 years service in the Massachusetts Naval brigade, six years as commander, and active participation in the Spanish war.

Because his residence happens to be in Middlesex and not in Norfolk is not the reason for his prominence in the business life of Boston and New England, nor does it explain how he was able to save from wreck one of the oldest Boston banks by his financial ability, integrity and force of character, taking charge of it at the brink of dissolution and building it up until today few financial institutions in Boston stand higher.

These qualifications of a candidate are personal to the individual and it is qualifications of this kind that fit a representative to be what his constituency desire and expect—Brookline Press.

Report of Nonantum

Industrial School.

On Wednesday morning, July 6, 1904, the Nonantum Industrial School was opened with an enrollment of 206 children, their ages ranging from 4 to 14 years.

They were divided into six classes, each being allowed, as far as possible, to decide in which class he would choose to work.

Six teachers, with four assistants were in charge of the classes. We found it necessary, later, to engage an assistant teacher for the primary class, as many times the children in this department numbered 45.

In the Kindergarten, where 39 children whose average age was 4-2 years, were in daily attendance, the work was most satisfactorily carried on by Miss M. Louise Randall, with Miss Nellie E. Terrell, as assistant. The whole number enrolled in this department was 76. The cost of supplies was only $2.86, as there was already on hand much occupation material that could be utilized.

The primary class was in charge of Miss Ida E. Ward with Miss Mary S. Redican to assist her. 59 children were enrolled here with an average attendance of 35. As the average age of the class was 7 years, the manual work was necessarily simple. It comprised the cutting and pasting of pictures into scrap books, card-making, modelling and weaving on small looms. $4.04 was expended for supplies.

Mr. C. C. Bradford, with Miss Ellen Sullivan as assistant, conducted the cooking classes, each class having a session of one and a half hours. 94 were enrolled in this department with an average attendance of 42 girls whose average age was 11 years. For supplies we spent only $5.52 for the ladies of the Social Science Club gave to the girls materials for shirt waists and dresses and we received from Otis Bros. of Newton a donation of $5 worth of supplies.

On Tuesdays and Thursdays, the girls received instruction in millinery under Mrs. Blue's guidance. Hats and trimmings were solicited by the ladies and their friends. The children learned to line hats neatly and trim them most tastefully. The results of this new occupation were very satisfactory. On account of the liberal donations for this work, only $5.62 was spent for supplies.

In the cooking department, where two classes were accommodated each morning, there was an average attendance of 17 children. The average age was 11 years. The cost of supplies was $16.01. Miss Stella M. Thayer assisted Miss Sarah L. Bates who had charge of the classes.

In the woodwork department, we enrolled 53 boys, 24 boys, whose average age was 12 years, were in daily attendance. Many useful household articles were made here with an expense of $25.38 for supplies. Mr. J. E. Owens directed the work.

The total enrollment of the school was 357 children. The average attendance was 180.

Many donations for the different departments were received, thus lessening the expense of the school. The total cost of the school was $600.40. For tools for the woodwork department we spent $18.32. Tools for the millinery cost $2.75. For sundries we spent $15.30.

The salaries and carfare of the teachers amounted to $488.69.

Street Railway Notes

The management of the Boston and Worcester Trolley Air Line have decided to maintain the fifteen minute schedule between Boston and Worcester as long as there is a demand for same. The foliage along the line is beginning to change and offers more of an attractive view than ever, and the riding between Boston and Worcester has been growing heavier as fall approaches. Over 80,000 fares were taken on Labor Day, which was the biggest day in the history of the road. The finishing of all the double tracks over the private way of the company makes it easier to maintain the schedule and makes the road more popular than ever. On account of the grandeur of the scenery along the line during the month of September, the Company expects as busy a season as during the summer traffic and are making preparations for ample accommodations for its patrons.

Newell C. Smith who has just resigned as superintendent of the Newton division of the Newton street railway company, to accept the position of superintendent of the Mystic Valley street railway at Mystic, Conn., was tendered a pleasant surprise early Thursday morning of last week by the employees and officials of the Boston Suburban Electric Company. Shortly after 1 P.M. Smith was asked to come to the Norumbega car barn on Commonwealth avenue. He did so, and found the place in total darkness. As he groped his way through the door, the lights were suddenly turned on, and he found himself facing some 200 employees of the company, who had assembled there to greet him. The barn had been tastefully decorated for the occasion and tables spread for a banquet placed in the center of the floor. When Mr. Smith had recovered from his surprise, Pres. Adams D. Claffin of the company, in a graceful speech, presented the retiring official with a handsome engraved silver service and a purse of $50 in gold, the gift of the officials and employees of the company. Mr. Smith was taken completely by surprise, but responded in a few well chosen words, in which he expressed his gratitude at the reception accorded him, and his regret at leaving the service of the road with which he has been associated since 1896. The company then sat down to the banquet. Pres. Claffin presided and acted as toastmaster. There were brief speeches by the officials of the road, the division superintendents and some of the employees.

Mr. Burr's Will.

The will of Isaac Tucker Burr of Newton, who died Aug. 31 has been filed for probate at East Cambridge. The estate is thought to be valued at $2,000,000. His sons, Herman Merrick Burr, Isaac Tucker Burr, Winthrop Burr and Allison Burr, and their survivors, are made executors and trustees of all trust funds. He expressed the wish that the number of trustees of any trust fund shall not be less than two at any one time, and in case of death the trustees shall be appointed by the probate court or any other court having jurisdiction.

To his wife, Anna Francis, he leaves $100,000, to his sister Catherine he gives $1000, and to his sister Martha $3000. To his daughters Anna and Cora, and to his four sons named above, he gives $100,000 each, while to his youngest daughter Bertha, who is otherwise provided for, he gives $1000. To Amanda, the widow of his brother John, he bequeathed $5000. All the employees at his residence who have been there for three years prior to his death, he gives $200 each.

A trust fund of $10,000 is set aside, the income to be paid semiannually to Mary A. Townsend of Lancaster. A trust fund of $25,000 is also created the income to be paid semiannually to Nellie Burr Leonard. The rest and residue of the estate is left to his wife, income to be paid semiannually and at her death to be divided among her children. The will is returnable Oct. 11.

First Church in Newton.

The most interesting event in this city next week will be the dedicatory services at the First (Congregational) church in Newton at Newton Centre. The present structure is the sixth in the history of the society and cost $107,100. It occupies a site selected about 1712 by a committee of the General Court as the exact geographical centre of the town, for the erection of the 3rd building of the society. The two previous buildings having been located on Centre street, first at the old cemetery and afterwards on the Colby estate.

The First church was established in 1664 and up to 1781 was the only church in town. At that time the 2nd Congregational Society was formed and followed by others since 1840. During the 240 years of its history, there have been but 6 buildings, an average of 40 years each, and 10 ministers, or an average of 24 years each. A truly remarkable record.

The services begin Sept. 16 and continue until Sept. 25th. The program is as follows: Sept. 16, Preparatory Lecture, 7.45 p.m.; Sept. 18, Dedication, Sermon by Rev. S. E. Herrick, 10.30 a.m.; Communion, 4.00 p.m.; Fellowship Service, Congregational churches in Newton, 7.30 p.m.; Sept. 21, Reception to Rev. and Mrs. E. M. Noyes, (for members of the church, congregation and invited guests), 10.30 a.m.; Sept. 25, Fellowship Service, Churches in Newton Centre, 7.45 p.m.; Sept. 25, Historical Service, 10.30 a.m.; Sermon by Rev. E. M. Noyes, Sunday School Rally 12.30 p.m.; Christian Endeavor Rally, at 8.00 p.m.; Sermon by Rev. Francis E. Clark, 7.45 p.m.

TERRY-BARKER

The marriage of Mr. Roscoe Raymond Perry of Waban to Miss Senira Eugenia Barker, the daughter of Mrs. Adelaide A. Barker of Arlington, took place at the Unitarian Church of that town last Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, Rev. Frederick Gill, its pastor, officiating.

The bride, wearing a gown of soft white messaline silk, with chiffon trimmings, with cleaves, bertha and collar of Duchesse lace, the conventional veil and carrying a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley, was escorted to the chancel on the arm of her mother, and preceded by the maid of honor, Miss Madeline Porter of Arlington, dressed in light green cygne silk, the bridesmaids, Miss Anna M. Barker of Westmoreland, N. H. and Miss Harriet L. Smith of Boston, wearing white chiffon silk over green and carrying bouquets of maiden hair fern, and the ushers, Messrs. Lindsay K. Foster and John G. Brackett of Arlington, Frank Hodgins and Frederick Jones of Boston, Ernest Morrison and Lyman B. Holmes of Allston. The church was decorated with palms, corn and white hydrangeas in a beautiful arrangement of green and white.

Following the ceremony was a largely attended reception at the home of the bride's mother, 129 Pleasant street, Arlington, which was decorated in green and white and pink and white. Mr. and Mrs. Perry were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Barker and the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George K. Heid of Waban, Mr. and Mrs. Perry will make their future home at 12 Rockledge road Newton Highlands.

Golf.

The event of the fall season, the tournament for the founder's cup and the Brae Burn country club championship, began last Saturday. Qualification was 18 holes, medal play, scratch, the best eight scores qualifying for the founder's cup and club championship, and the next best eight for the consolation cup. The match play rounds will be at 18 holes, except the finals, which will be 36. The second round must be completed on or before Saturday, Sept. 17, the semifinals by Sept. 24, and the finals on or before Oct. 1.

The founder's cup, won in 1901 by Fred H. Hovey, and in 1902 and 1903 by Percival Gilbert, must be won three times to become the permanent property of the winner. The best scores were two 85s by O. F. Herrick and Raymond Gorton, Percival Gilbert taking an 86. The scores of the qualification round follow: O. F. Herrick, 85; R. Gorton, 85; P. Gilbert, 86; H. M. Townsend, 89; A. L. Squier, 90; F. M. Sherman Jr, 90; W. H. Cady, 91; C. O'Brien, 92.

The drawings for the first match play rounds: CHAMPIONSHIP. H. I. Townsend vs F. M. Sherman Jr. O. F. Herrick vs A. L. Squier. Raymond Gorton vs W. H. Cady. P. Gilbert vs H. C. O'Brien.

CONSOLATION. F. W. Eddy vs W. F. Herrick. A. L. Newell vs W. B. Herrick. A. H. Gilbert vs W. S. Wait. P. Whiting vs G. S. Sprague.

A. H. Findlay, professional, played a round on the Brae Burn course recently making 18 holes in 73, 37 out and 36 in. This is the lowest professional record for the lengthened course, the bogey of which is 60.

At the Woodland golf club Saturday afternoon the event was an 18-hole handicap tournament, which was won by P. O'Donnell, who, with a handicap of 10, made both best gross and net scores of 80 and 80 respectively. W. L. Church was second.

The Woodland golf club caddies had a medal play tournament Saturday for five prizes offered by the club. They were won in order by E. McCourt, C. Cutler, N. Fitzgerald, P. A. Cutler and E. Clark.

The qualifying round of the tournament for the club championship of the Newton Centre golf club was played Saturday afternoon. Qualification was 18 holes medal play, scratch, the best 16 scores qualifying for match play. The first match play round must be completed on or before noon of Saturday Sept. 17, and the second round will be played on the afternoon of that day. The semifinals and final must be played on or before Saturday, Sept. 24. The best score was the 69, made by E. F. Rockwood. The following are the pairings for the first round at match play: C. H. Fessenden vs C. E. Rice. H. I. Ordway vs A. W. Small. F. H. StJohn vs B. Chester. H. W. Colby vs W. H. Burr. C. H. Merriam vs A. C. Badger. G. E. Houghton vs C. H. Goddard. E. F. Rockwood vs F. H. Pillsbury. F. D. Nichols vs G. B. King.

Words of Praise.

Newtonville, Mass., Sept. 10, 1904. J. C. Brimblecom, Esq., Newton Graphic, Newton.

Dear Sir: At a meeting of Charles Ward Post 62, G. A. R. held on Thursday evening, Sept. 8, it was voted to extend to the Newton Graphic the thanks of the Post for the very full account of the reception which was given by them to George H. Thomas Post of Chicago on the occasion of their visit to Newton. The account as published in the Graphic was so full, and so accurate, that the Post ordered it placed on file as a part of the history of the Post.

Allow me to add my personal thanks for the interest which you have always shown in Charles Ward Post. Sincerely Yours, Henry D. Degen, Adjutant.

The feature of the week in congressional politics was a violent attack on the record of Captain Weeks, an innuendo upon his character and an hysterical appeal to the Christian people of the district to support his opponent.

The character of our ex-mayor needs no defence in this city of his home, but it may not be amiss to inform the voters of the Twelfth Congressional district, that if ever a political candidate deserved the hearty, yea, enthusiastic support of Christian people it is the Hon. John W. Weeks.

Captain Weeks is a member of the First Unitarian Society in Newton, has served as a member and chairman of its standing committee, and is a regular attendant upon its church services. In all matters pertaining to the welfare of that church and its influence for the uplift of humanity,
his advice and influence are eagerly sought, freely given and heartily welcomed. He is, moreover, a believer in the practical application of Christian principles in daily life, and has labored long and hard towards awakening the interest of the church people of this city, in the cause of good government. He has spoken many times in the various churches of Newton on this phase of Christian work and has received the title of "the apostle of good citizenship" from his friends.

The filing of Republican nomination papers last Wednesday disclosed
the interesting fact that after weeks of hard work, the Bemis supporters in this city were only able to secure delegations in three wards of the city. The canvas for delegates in the Bemis interests has been thorough many representative men being approached and refusing to oppose the candidacy of Captain Weeks. In wards where no lists were filed, it is fair to suppose that the Bemis supporters are numerically weak and with one or two exceptions the lists filed are not of a character to ensure very strong support. Capt. Weeks will be heartily supported in this city and he will receive the vote of every Newton delegate in the convention.

Two hundred and forty years is a long period of time, even for such fundamental principles as are represented by the church, and Newton may well be proud of the history of its First Church, which celebrates such an anniversary next week, by dedicating a new and beautiful house of worship.

An elaborate program has been prepared, of which an important feature are the fellowship meetings with their brother Congregational churches, and with the churches of Newton Centre. The whole city will join in congratulations to the Society on its past and in best wishes for its future.

Mr. Fred H. Tucker of Ward One, who has been a very active and efficient member of the school committee during the past three years has been persuaded to stand for re-election.
This will be good news indeed as it is an excellent policy for the city to continue the present school board in office as long as possible.

The enthusiasm which has developed over the candidacy of Mr. Simpson for the Governor's council has astonished the politicians of the district and argues well for his selection for this honorable position.

M. Greenwood Dead.

Samuel G. Greenwood, a well known shorthand teacher, died Wednesday at his home, 10 Highland terrace, Newtonville. He had been ill for several weeks. He was born in Buenos Ayres in 1849. He was engaged in business in Chicago, later removing to Boston. About 17 years ago he opened a shorthand school. He formerly taught in the evening schools at Lynn. For 10 years he was superintendent of the Sunday school in the Phillips Congregational Church, Watertown, and for two years in Park Street Church.
During the Indian wars Mr. Greenwood served in the regular army under Gen. Custer. A widow survives.
Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30.

NOMINATION
PAPERS FILED.

Nomination papers for the primary election to be held Sept. 27th were filed Wednesday afternoon at the offices of the several city committees of the republican, democratic and socialist parties.

At the republican headquarters in the Masonic building, Newtonville, the greatest interest centered in the possibility of contests over delegates to the congressional convention, where Hon. John W. Weeks of this city is a leading candidate. Opposition to the Weeks delegations manifested itself in but three wards, 1, 5 and 7, although it was rumored that hard work had been done in behalf of Candidate Bemis all over the city.
But a set of delegates were filed for other conventions in all the wards, except in Ward 3 where the voter can take his choice of two state delegations, that headed by H. L. Burrage being in the interests of Whipple for state treasurer and that headed by ex-mayor Wilson being opposed to Whipple. Representatives Edgar W. Warren and James A. Lowell were unopposed for renomination, but one paper being filed for these offices.

The full list of nominations is as follows:

Golden Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. John Dolan of Newton Lower Falls observed their golden wedding anniversary at their home on Concord street last Tuesday.

Mr. Dolan was born Feb. 2, 1835, in county Cavan, Ire., and came to this country in 1846. He has resided here over half a century. For 35 years he was a paper maker with the late Thomas Rice, and is now a coal dealer. Mrs. Dolan's maiden name was Catherine Farley. Mr. and Mrs. Dolan have four surviving children, Mrs. J. T. Brady of Norwood, Mrs. James A. Earley, wife of the superintendent of the Newton Lower Falls postoffice; Mrs. M. O.
Nelson, wife of Dr. Nelson of Natick, and Mrs. John W. Shannon of Muskegon, Mich., all of whom were present, together with twenty-one grandchildren.

The days observance began with celebration of a Nuptial High Mass at St. John's Church where Holy Communion was received by the bridal couple of fifty years ago, surrounded by their entire family. During the forenoon a family group of Mr. and Mrs. Dolan, their four daughters and twenty-one grandchildren was photographed by Moore of Newton. From three till ten o'clock Mr. and Mrs.
Dolan received their family connections and many old friends. Light refreshments were served and the house was charmingly decorated with trailing vines and potted plants while bunches of beautiful hot house flowers sent by loving friends were much in evidence. In the parlor, however, golden rod held full sway and under a bell of its feathery yellow fronds the bridal pair received. Unique among the numerous gifts was a tiny barrel of gold, filled with glittering bits
sent by an absent niece, Mrs. J. H.
Molloy of Brooklyn, N. Y.

The daughters' gift to their parents was a beautifully wrought purse of gold which the grandchildren filled to its capacity with gold pieces of different denominations, the sons-in-law presented a leather covered easy chair of luxurious and generous proportions and from the families of Bernard and John Early was a cut glass vase of exceeding beauty.

Aaron R. Cook.

Newton Highlands has suffered a serious loss in the recent death of Mr. Cook: such loss as it is to every community when any life touched with manliness, integrity, honor, passes onward.

He was a grandson of Deacon Asa Cook, for many years connected with the history of the Newton Centre Congregational Church, and was born in Newton, where his many friends all testify to the esteem in which he had been held throughout his entire life in our city.

He was proprietor of the first apothecary store opened in this village in 1872, retaining the place for eight years since which time he has served as bookkeeper for the firm of W. T. Barker and Co in Boston, a term of twenty-four years of faithful and well appreciated service.

His uniformly kind and gentlemanly spirit commended itself to every one and tributes of praise for his worthy character and loving disposition abound on every side. "A smile for everyone" is the heartfelt expression.

Street Railway Notes

The Newton Street Railway feels that they can accommodate their patrons by decreasing the running time on some of their lines, particularly is this true on the line between Newton and Newton Lower Falls. The greatest obstacle to overcome in connection with this is the very large number of stops necessitated by the bridges crossing the Boston and Albany tracks. At each of these points it is necessary for the cars to come to a full stop, and when one realizes that there are 8 to 10 of these it can be readily appreciated how much time is lost. In their endeavor to do away with as many of these regular stops as possible, they have had signs placed at Newtonville Square and at Commonwealth Avenue and Washington street, by means of which they hope to inform the public that the cars will stop only on the near side of the crossing at these two points. This will cut out no regular stop, as the cars now stop before crossing the tracks and again come to a full stop after crossing the tracks. The railway feels that their patrons will appreciate the wisdom of this move and the people will very quickly understand this change and govern themselves accordingly. The Street Railway are making these changes and anticipate making more, in the belief that anything of this kind will better accommodate its patrons.

BANNS OF MARRIAGE.

A Custom That Dates Back to the Primitive Christian Church.

The custom of publishing the banns of marriage dates back to the primitive church, for Tertullian, who died A. D. 240, states that warning of intended marriages was given among the early Christians.

It appears that the publication of banns was habitual in many places long before there was any general law on the subject, since Gregory IV. (1085-1216) speaks of the banns (from Latin bannum, a proclamation; Anglo-Saxon, ban) being given out in church, according to custom. The practice was introduced into France about the ninth century and in 1176 was enforced in the diocese of Paris.

The earliest enactment on the subject in England was an order made in the synod of Westminster in 1200 to the effect that no marriage should be celebrated till the banns had been published in the church on three several Sundays or feast days. This rule was made obligatory throughout the church by the fourth Lateran council held in Rome in 1215. By act of parliament banns must now be given out in England on three Sundays.—London Answers.

MEN'S HATS IN KOREA.

The Reason They Are Wide Brimmed, High and Fragile.

In a lecture on Korea, Burton Holmes, speaking of the men's hats, said:

"Though Korea and especially Seoul has many foreigners and the people have become accustomed to strangers, they adhere closely to their curious costumes, the hat being the most impressive part of the garb. The Korean gentleman never removes his hat in the presence of company, either in the house or outside. The hat must be worn constantly during waking hours."

"The hat consists of a wide brim and a crown high enough to contain the topknot. The hats are made of many materials and vary in price from $2 to $40. Their form dates back to a time, centuries ago, when a king who was fearful of plots and conspiracies devised the head wear as a protection against his noble enemies. If men could not get their heads together, he argued, they could not engage in a conspiracy, so he issued an edict compelling his courtiers to wear hats with gigantic brims. Then in order to prevent fighting on the street he ordered that these hats be made of a thin porcelain. In case of a fight the hat would certainly be broken. This would necessitate explanations from the noblemen, and street rows were thereby ended."

"Though the hats are no longer made of porcelain, they are sufficiently fragile to be broken if the wearers engage in any violent demonstrations."

Why Burton Committed Suicide. Burton, the vivacious author of "The Anatomy of Melancholy" who had the reputation of being able to raise laughter in any company, however "mute and morose," was in reality constitutionally depressed, and it is believed that he was at last so overcome by his malady that he ended his life in a fit of melancholy.

A Cold Cold. "I understand that prima donna failed to give her farewell concert because she had a cold."

"Yes," answered the manager. "How did she contract it?"

"Well, it wasn't an ordinary cold. It is what is technically known as a box office chill."—Exchange.

Relatively. Maud—Do you like Mr. Dinwiddie? Ethel—Oh, yes; I like him, relatively speaking. Maud—Relatively speaking? What do you mean by that? Ethel—You see, I promised to be a sister to him.—St. Louis Republic.

A New Station.

Mr. Joseph W. Crowell who is well known in Newton as an expert automobilist has built and just opened a new automobile station on Commonwealth avenue near Walnut street. The new station is convenient to Newton Centre, Newtonville and West Newton and is on the most frequented automobile thoroughfare in the state. The building is one story, 100 x 50 feet in size and is extremely well adapted for the business. Two large doors one on each side of the structure allow of entrance and exit without danger of collision, and within on a concrete flooring is ample room for repairs and for storage of upwards of 40 cars. Electricity furnishes the light and power and the machinery includes an 18 inch lathe 8 feet in length, a speed lathe, shaper, spindle drill, a 22 inch drill press and a blacksmith's forge and tools. An automatic gasoline pump with a flexible steel hose makes rapid and clean work of replenishment, and water connections are near the entrance and exit.

Nicely arranged and well equipped offices and ladies waiting room are at the front of the building and a large room for supplies and stores is adjacent.

Mr. Crowell has many up to date ideas in the management of his station including a check system for robes and accessories, constant service day and night, and employs only the best of machinists in the repair department.

Complete Magazine Free With Every Copy of the Boston Sunday Post.

The Boston Sunday Post has made a new departure in Sunday journalism. The publisher, beginning with next Sunday's edition, will present a complete magazine free to every reader of the Boston Sunday Post.

The Sunday magazine is just what its name implies, a magazine of about the same size as Collier's Weekly. The cover for the magazine next Sunday is lithographed in six tints.

The contributors to the Sunday magazine include the leading writers and best illustrators in the world. No other Sunday paper in New England but the Boston Sunday Post has ever presented its readers with a complete magazine. It's another tribute to the enterprise and booming qualities of the Boston Sunday Post.

DeMeritte School.

Four years ago Mr. Edwin DeMeritte—for many years identified with the success and prosperity of two of the best private schools in Boston—threw off the shackles of a partnership which hampered progress and started a school for boys at 30 Huntington avenue, Boston. From his long experience he brought into the new enterprise a determination to build up a school where manliness and education go hand in hand. He further strengthened his position by associating with him young men, fresh from the college, strong in modern methods and strong in character.

The broad and progressive ideas of the founder, the ability of his associates and their fidelity to their work, the combination of ripe experience and modern methods, have already made it a school strong in numbers, strong in the character of its boys, strong in its educational work and strong in the preparation it gives to boys to fight the battle of life successfully. 2c

PHILIPPINES AT WORLD'S FAIR

Complete Exhibition of Island People and Industries Covers Forty-seven Acres and is Independent of Larger Show.

Not even in the heart of Manila city could there be found forty-seven acres of Philippine territory as interesting as that amount of space covered by the islands' display at the World's Fair. Here is an exposition within an exposition, a little wheel that revolves independently of the larger one encompassing it.

Scores of buildings are filled with exhibits, native life is depicted by as many different villages as there are tribes on the islands, military drills are given by Philippine troops, and concerts are rendered by native bands. For its amusement features the Philippine exposition has the humorous Igorrote, who dines on dog meat, and visitors are entertained by Visayan actors and actresses. Nothing is lacking to make the show complete.

The Administration building is a replica of the government offices in Manila, while the Art and Education building reproduces in miniature the cathedral within the walled city, even the mellowed tints of age being faithfully rendered. A section of the ancient but still serviceable town wall has been reconstructed to serve the double purpose of a gateway to the show and a museum of arms and war relics. The other main edifices are types of Filipino homes, being built of undressed timber, bamboo and rattan, with thatched roofs and broad verandas.

Then there are the tribal villages nestling under the trees, some of the houses perched high up among the boughs, others on piles above the waters of the Arroyo. In all of them actual dwellings fashioned of native materials by native workmanship and illustrating the manners, customs and pursuits of their occupants. Here are women weaving a coarse cloth on a rude hand loom, others making baskets, others tending irrigated fields of rice. One group of men are in village council, trying an offender according to their tribal laws; others are slowly moving in a circular dance to the thump of tom-toms and the clang of brass gongs; others, again, are smelting iron by the aid of a primitive but most ingenious bellows, the constituent parts of which are a bamboo tube and an airtight wop of feathers working therein like the piston of a syringe. And these are but a few of an almost endless variety of life pictures.

The ethnological problem is a somewhat complicated one; but, although there are no fewer than sixteen races represented among the village dwellers, the scouts and the constabulary, each race speaking its own dialect and following its own customs, all may be roughly classified into four groups—the true aborigines or non-Malays, the pagan Malays, the Christian Malays and the Mohammedan Malays.

The first are the dwarf Negritos, with dark skins and woolly heads, wearers of scanty raiment, proficient in the use of the bow and poisoned arrow, a race of nomads and forest dwellers, pure and simple. They live in their own stockaded village.

Next to them are the Igorrotes, whose origin is traced back to the first wave of Malay invasion. Here, again, we have scanty clothing, amounting almost to nudity, but copper colored skins, long wavy tresses, pleasant featured faces and fine physiques, even though the stature be small. Among these pagan Malays are the head hunters and the dog eaters. They are savages, yet have their code of laws and a knowledge of several primitive industries.

The Christian Malays, produced by the second wave of invasion, are represented by the Visayans, a tall and handsome race, dressing well, living in pretty houses, skilled in weaving, dyeing, basket making, but making, wood carving and other handicrafts, musicians of no mean merit, the one group of natives who came early and thoroughly under the influence of the early Spanish settlers.

Very different are the Moros, who swept into the islands from the Malay peninsula last of all, bringing with them their Mohammedan religion, also a knowledge of gunpowder acquired from the Koran from the Arabs—fanatics like their teachers, pirates, blood-thirsty, treacherous and vindictive fellows, ever at war among themselves and with the whole outside world. Despite their ferocity they are a clever race, dress handsomely, have their sultans and their slaves and are expert seamen, while long continued pillage on the high seas has surrounded them with many of the luxuries and conveniences of western civilization.

The buildings of Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries show all the varied natural products, also the extremely primitive processes as yet in vogue, while in the Women's building we are introduced to a number of native manufactures, including the beautiful fabrics from the just, banana and pineapple fibers. This information is collated in the Building of Commerce, where a unique and most effective method of exhibiting is followed. In one hall are samples of all the articles produced for export, among which manila fiber, of course, holds the chief place of prominence, while in a second hall are all the manufactures from every country that are imported and find a ready market among the populace. Thus the business man gets a dual lesson. He sees what he can profitably take from the islands, and also what he may profitably send to them. When it is added that a large number of representative Filipinos have been brought over to visit the Exposition and study American business methods and manufactures, it will be recognized that great benefit both to the islands and to the world at large must result from this work of mutual enlightenment.

CONCERTS BY MASSES BANDS

Prizes Aggregating $30,000 to Be Distributed at the World's Fair.

Never were musical events in America planned upon such an elaborate scale as those of the World's Fair. A series of concerts will be given by competing bands in contest for prizes offered by the World's Fair. These contests will take place in Festival Hall, Sept. 12 to 17.

Nine cash prizes, aggregating $30,000, are offered for the successful bands. The prizes are divided so as to give to the organization scoring the highest number of points $3,250; $2,500 will be given to the band scoring the second highest number of points and $1,500 to the one getting the third highest number.

The above division is made for bands in Class A, which consist of twenty members. In the B class $10,000 will be given in prizes—first, $4,500; second, $3,500; third, $2,000.

Class C, which includes bands of thirty-five members, will enjoy the division of $12,750. For the organization scoring the highest number of points a prize of $4,000 has been named. The second prize is $4,000 and the third $2,700.

Bands employed by the Exposition are not permitted to contest. All players must be bona fide members, and each musician must have been enrolled at least three months prior to the date of the contest. Each band must send to the bureau the name of its members and a nominal entrance fee.

Festival Hall concerts by masses bands will be given at 7:30 each day during the contest. In which all contesting bands will take part under the direction of a distinguished conductor. All bands entering must agree to play one concert in addition to the competing concert and masses concerts.

A separate programme has been prepared by the Bureau of Music for each class, and each band will play through the full programme of its class. The numbers in all three programmes are by eminent composers and are chosen with the view of bringing out the qualities of the bands performing them. The list of composers includes Wagner, Gounod, Offenbach, Verdi, Saint-Saens, Bizet, Strauss and Leoncavallo.

WEATHER AT WORLD'S FAIR.

Cool Nights and Delightful Indian Summer to Be Expected at St. Louis.

Usually the warmest month of the year, July proved to be one of the most pleasant of the World's Fair season, the average temperature being 67 degrees, a record lower than that made by either Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati or Chicago. The weather bureau records show that the temperatures in St. Louis during July were just between the extremes recorded at New Orleans and St. Paul, cities located at great variance.

August in St. Louis is a month of cool nights, and September and October are the most delightful months of the year. It is that period known as Indian summer, when the foliage and birds linger to challenge the coming winter. Nowhere on the American continent is there a spot more delightful than the World's Fair city, a garden of blooming flowers and spraying fountains.

St. Louis, like all cities, experienced several hot days during July, but her highest temperature recorded was 93 degrees against 94 degrees registered by the thermometer at Chicago. On the same day the mercury rose to 90 degrees in Philadelphia, and scores of heat prostrations were reported from New York and Boston.

The relative humidity shows St. Louis to be about normal. Assuming absolutely no moisture in the atmosphere to be zero and absolute wetness to be 100, the relative humidities for July, taken from the records of more than twenty years, Boston shows 70.0, New York 72.2, Philadelphia 68.0, Cincinnati 64.8, Chicago 63.9 and St. Louis 63.3. The same degree of heat in two places, with different degrees of humidity, would cause it to seem the hotter at the point of greater density.

St. Louis may therefore rightly claim to be a summer resort this summer, positively one of the most comfortable and delightful places on the map.

Newton Hospital.

The quarterly meetings of the Board of Trustees are always interesting to those who are associated in the hospital work, and the value of Newton's institution has never been more manifest than at the meeting which was held on the seventh.

The members in attendance were President Leeson, Messrs. Ames, Cobb, Haskell, Lodge, Nichols, Paine and Saltonstall; Drs. Hunt and Keith; Messrs. Bullens, Day, Earley, Pratt, Tyler and Bray.

Among the absent was Mrs. Lowell, one of the honored members who could not be spared from the Board till her work on earth was finished.

During the past quarter the capacity of the Hospital has been taxed to the utmost and every energy of those caring for the sick has been called into play.

The Reports which were presented show that the growing usefulness of the Hospital will make absolutely necessary increased accommodations for a larger corps of nurses, not merely for service in the Hospital but to supply the call for hospital nurses in the homes.

That pressing need, the new kitchen is ever present and following closely is the equally imperative demand for a new maternity ward and larger and better accommodations for private cases from which a revenue is received to help the general work of the Hospital.

Before another quarter passes, Hospital Sunday will have come and gone.

We are approaching the quarter century mark of our Hospital work and the Sunday which is set apart for our offerings should suitably mark this period of our history. The affairs of the Hospital are under a wise administrative head and the ever increasing usefulness calls for increased facilities to make possible of accomplishment all of the good which is set for us to do.

The first primary in Newton under chapter 454, acts of 1904, commonly called the Luce law, will be held Tuesday, Sept. 27, as the law provides that they shall be held on the sixth Tuesday preceding the State election. They will be held wholly by wards as the Board of Aldermen have determined.

An order has been adopted by the Board of Aldermen designating the polling places for the State primaries as heretofore located.

The polls will be open from 12 to 9 p. m. Nominations are to be made in accordance with the provisions of sections 107 to 116, inclusive, of the election law.

The ballots for the caucuses are to be prepared by the City Clerk. A separate ballot will be provided for each party, on paper of a different color from that of any other party.

Except as otherwise provided in the caucus act the provisions of the election law relating to election officers, voting places at elections, election apparatus and blanks, calling and conduct of elections counting and recounting of votes at elections, corrupt practices and penalties shall apply to caucuses. The regular election officers will serve at caucuses, or as many of them as are needed.

A voter presenting himself at the entrance to the enclosed space, will give his precinct, street, number, and name, and the same being found on the voting list he must tell the ballot clerk the party ballot he desires. This will be announced by the ballot clerk and recorded on the list, and he will be given the ballot. He will then proceed precisely the same as at an election.

The counting of the votes is to be done the same as at an election, except that the ballots of each party must be canvassed and recorded separately, and sealed in a separate package.

The business of the primary will be: To choose delegates to State, County, Councilor, Senatorial, and Congressional conventions; and to nominate candidates for Representatives in the General Court.

A Most Desirable School for Young Children.

We wish to call the attention of parents to the "Newton Kindergarten and Froebel School" conducted by Mrs. Sweetser and her sister Miss Williams, at an attractive school building on Highland Ave., West Newton.

Our testimony as to its high character and usefulness is unqualified and is given solely from our interest in the school, the result of the benefits which we think our own children have received.

Beginning with the Kindergarten, the advanced courses cover the full preparation for the High School. Small classes and the same teachers for several years give the best possible conditions for the individual development and progress of the child. The teachers, of whom there are a large number in proportion to the number of scholars, become thoroughly acquainted with and interested in their pupils and are able to carry out continuous plans for their development, without the loss of time common with more frequent change of teachers.

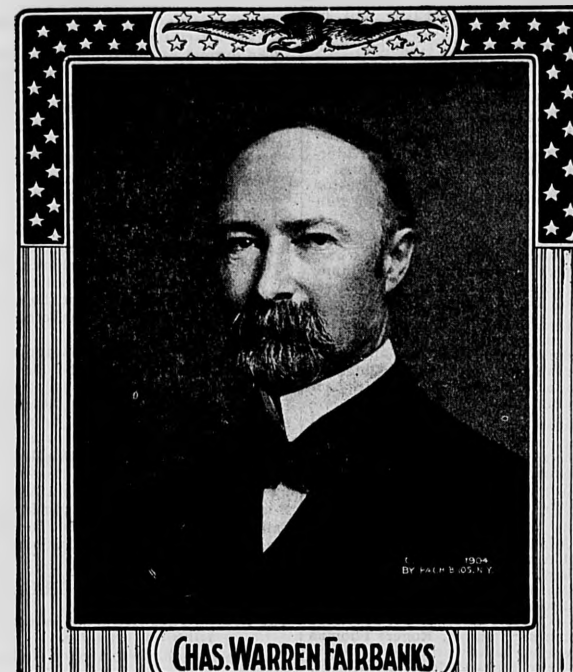

And most important of all, we appreciate highly the natural talent for the work and the quiet helpful influence over the young children possessed by Mrs. Sweetser and Miss Williams.

We do not believe a better Kindergarten exists in the country and we most heartily recommend it.

Signatures: JOHN W. WELLES, HENRY B. DAY, JAMES R. CARTER. Descriptive pamphlet will be sent on application to Mrs. Sweetser or without doubt she would gladly call on any parent who wished to consult her or get further information.

THE PLAYHOUSE.

Park Theatre—At the Park Theatre, Boston, Erza Kendall, America's foremost comedian, will enter upon the third and last week of his engagement in "Weather Beaten Benson" which has proved the greatest laughing success that he has ever produced since he became a star under the management of Liebler and Co. In his newest character Mr. Kendall has a type of American life that is thoroughly amusing and therefore his powers of drollery are exercised to their utmost. The stage settings are wonderful for their effectiveness, and in one scene there is a rain storm introduced in dramatic climax which is the most realistic storm in modern theatricals. Thousands of gallons of water are used for this one scene and drench the luckless comedian as no star has been soaked in years and it is one of the great hits of the production.

Hollis Street Theatre—After having had a run of over a year in London and of nine months in New York City Charles Froman and George Edwards have presented at the Hollis Street Theatre, in Boston, the English farcical comedy with music, "The Girl from Kays." The piece has made the most emphatic kind of a hit, the critics and reviewers pronouncing it the best work of its kind that the stage has ever had. The praise of the work has been most lavish and it is destined to repeat in Boston the enormous success it scored in London and New York. Unlike most comedies of its class, "The Girl from Kays" contains an interesting and diverting story. The star of the very big company is Mr. Sam Leard who is said to be exercising a funny. Heading the women's list is Miss Hattie Williams who has scored a most decided and emphatic hit. The comedy is to remain in Boston for a limited season during which there will be the usual matinees on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

For a World Congress.

The Evangelical Congregational Church of Auburndale, at a special business meeting called for the purpose last Friday evening, passed votes in support of the resolutions of the legislature of 1903, which are now pending before Congress, in favor of a regular international congress. Three votes were passed. One was a direct endorsement of the resolutions by the church "in order to help to promote the peace of the world." The second commended them to the Suffolk West Conference, of which the church is a member, and instructed its representatives in the conference to support the resolutions by voice and vote. The third asked the National Congregational Council to endorse the resolutions and to commend them to the Congregational churches of the country. The resolutions in question are as follows:

"Resolved, That the Congress of the United States be requested to authorize the president of the United States to invite the governments of the world to join in establishing in whatever way they may judge expedient, a regular international congress, to meet at stated periods, to deliberate upon the various questions of common interest to the nations and to make recommendations thereon to the governments."

"Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the senior senator and the senior representative of Massachusetts in Congress to be presented in their respective branches."

The action of the church was unanimous, except one vote given against the first vote above named. The subject has no denominational bearing whatever and it is competent for any religious or business or other organization, desiring to help to promote the peace of the world, to transmit to Congress a vote supporting the Massachusetts resolutions, which are believed to be a practical step toward the unity and peace of the world.

Messrs. Crouse and Stoddard, the well known bakers at 355 Centre street, Newton, have enlarged their lunch rooms, to accommodate the rapidly increasing business in this line. The capacity is nearly doubled and the additional room allows of better lighting effects. The tables are set with the daintiest of china and cut glass and the service and food are first class in ever particular.

The guests in the dining hall of the Auburndale Inn at Riverside, the resort of automobile and coaching parties as well as many of the canoeists who throng the Charles river, were thrown into a panic Saturday night by the sudden descent of the police upon the place in search of liquor. The officers went through every nook and corner, invaded the private dining rooms, but were unable to secure any evidence of the sale of intoxicants.

For some weeks the inn has been under police surveillance and officers in plain clothes from division 2 have spent several nights endeavoring to secure evidence against the place. Late Saturday afternoon Sergt. B. F. Burke secured a search warrant, and accompanied by patrolmen Tainter, Kite and David Neagle raided the inn shortly before 10.

The Auburndale Inn has been running for several seasons under the management of Alexander Brown of Boston and was about to close its doors for the year, the season being practically at an end.

There is said to be an interesting story with regard to the circumstances leading up to the raid Saturday night. It was at the instigation of Chief Tarbox that the inn was put under police surveillance, and, owing to the existing friction on between the chief and Mayor Weed, whose campaign against the alleged illegal liquor traffic in this city has aroused much comment it is a significant fact that the raid was made during the absence of the mayor from the city on a week's vacation.

JACK-HARVEY.

Miss Mayme Alice C. Harvey of Denver, was married to Dr. Lewis H. Jack of West Newton, Mass., at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Harvey, 1236 Ogden street on Wednesday last. Dr. George Hedell Vosburgh, pastor of the First Baptist Church of which the bride is a member, officiated, and Mr. Richards, organist of the church, played the wedding march. Miss Harvey is well known in Denver, having given physical culture lessons here for several years. Dr. Jack is a practicing physician and is well known in and about Boston.

The New England College of Languages not only offers, as for the past ten years, a fine list of courses in various languages, both ancient and modern, but it has instituted a new department this fall under the name of the Steinert Hall Preparatory School, where whatever studies are desired in preparation for college or professional schools may be taken. Prof. James B. Taylor, of our city, so long known as principal in the Berkley and Chauncy Hall schools, has accepted the headmastership and with the aid of Dr. Kunzer, (Ph. D., Berlin,) the president of the college has gathered a corps of expert male teachers whose names and records sufficiently attest their ability in their respective lines. Prof. Taylor may be consulted daily at the school rooms in Steinert Building 162 Boylston St.

Literary Notes.

McClure's for October is timely in the best sense. In the dramatic story of Governor LaFollete and the fierce political war which is rending the State of Wisconsin, Lincoln Steffens has found material, not only for a stirring story, but for the presentation of facts and principles of the gravest significance to the Republic. In sharp contrast appears an inspiring sketch of George William Curtis—"Friend of the Republic"—the editor well styles him—by Carl Schurz. Here is a most attractive picture of the finest type of the American gentleman, the ideal citizen, written by one who knew and appreciated his great worth. The climax of Ida M. Tarbell's monumental "History of the Standard Oil Company" is reached in a chapter of Conclusions. In convincing array she presents the facts she has unearthed concerning the great trust, with such infinite pains and remorseless thoroughness. John La Farge discusses five great works of Rubens in this selection of "One Hundred Masterpieces of Painting," under the classification of "Triumphs." In "A Good Samaritan," Mary R. Shipman Andrews, describes the humorous experiences of a young rector and an intoxicated friend whom he feels in duty bound to escort home. There is a love story and real human interest along with it. Lloyd Osborne in "Glass-Eyed Bill" has done one of his very best, full of dry humor, and a most interesting situation. Eugene Wood offers another of his bully bits of comedy from real life in describing the "Firemen's Tournament." As usual there is a bright story of children, this time "A Fruit of the Fair," by Marion Hill with some wonderful drawings by F. Y. Cory. Leroy Scott tells a fascinating story of mingled pathos, humor and tragedy in "The Prison Days of Billy MacCheek."

Two canoeists, a young woman and her escort, had a narrow escape from drowning Sunday afternoon in the Charles river at the Weston bridge, Auburndale. But for the presence of mind of Patrolman Kimball of the Newton police, both would have probably lost their lives. The officer, while on the bridge, heard a canoe upset beneath one of the arches in the bridge followed by the noise of a struggle in the water. Seizing a life preserver, he swung out over the side of the bridge rail for the purpose of aiding those beneath.

Owing to the recent rains, the current through the arch was running swiftly, and the form of a young man was a moment later washed through into view. He was floundering in the water, and though apparently unable to swim, had hold of the dress of his companion, and was endeavoring to get her ashore. Their canoe had sunk, and, excepting for the bit of dress, had carried the young woman down with it.

As they were washed out of the arch, officer Kimball succeeded in dropping the life preserver over the man's head. Though nearly exhausted, the man secured a firm hold on the preserver. By pulling on the rope attached to it, Kimball managed to drag both of the young people partly out of the water, and to keep them there until the park police boat came to his assistance.

The man and woman were taken to the park police office, and it was several hours before they recovered from the effects of their bath. The young people belong in Brookline, but their names could not be learned.

Oct. 25—Newton vs. Medford High at Newton.

Four Italians, while enjoying the national game in a field off Watertown street, Newton, Sunday afternoon, were suddenly closed in on by the police, who arrested the quartet on a charge of gaming on the Lord's day. They gave their names as Lorette Salucci, 18; Vincenzo Tocci, 22; Lorette Tocci, 17, and Antonio Tocci 18, and their residence as Brighton.

"HONEST, RIGHT, TRUE"

President Roosevelt So Described In Connecticut Convention of Republicans.

United States Senator O. H. Platt Rouses Great Enthusiasm In Happy Speech.

(Associated Press dispatch from Hartford, Conn., Sept. 13.)

In a vigorous defense of the Republican administration United States Senator Orville H. Platt, as temporary chairman, awakened much enthusiasm at the opening of the Republican state convention in the Auditorium tonight, the delegates and spectators cheering repeatedly the name of Theodore Roosevelt.

Senator Platt said:

"Theodore Roosevelt was not nominated as the standard bearer of the Republican party either by the efforts of designing and managing politicians or to please capitalist Wall street. He was nominated in obedience to the express will of the people—nominated with the acclaim of the people. No man can ever be nominated for president of the United States by acclamation in whom the people do not heartily, thoroughly and enthusiastically believe. It only waits for November to show the overwhelming extent of this confidence. Sneers will not belittle him; denunciations will not frighten him; personal attack will not weaken him; for he has already won his place in a safe and sure stronghold—the hearts and homes of the American people."

"He came to the discharge of presidential duties under most fearful and trying circumstances. He has trod where the wisest and bravest might have feared to tread—in the footsteps of the illustrious and beloved McKinley. He has gone forward along the pathway of duty without hesitation, without flinching, strong in rectitude, honest in purpose, with lofty courage and unimpeachable wisdom. If the Democratic party chooses to make Roosevelt, the man, the issue to this campaign we welcome that issue without fear. Every citizen of the United States from the professional politician to the schoolboy in his teens knows that in the heart of Theodore Roosevelt, the president, there is one overshadowing purpose, and that is to do what Roosevelt, the man, believes to be honest, right and true. What has he done that was not honest and right and true? In the interest of all that makes for American honor let us have a president who has but one guiding principle, and that is to do what he believes to be right for the honor of his country, for the upbuilding of its people, for the glory of its name. Would they have the people think him unsafe? No man is unsafe whose life is clean and pure and noble and who walks in one path only, the path where duty seems to him to point. In all that represents American manhood, American character, American progress, American welfare, Theodore Roosevelt stands forth today our most conspicuous example. It was because the Republicans of the United States recognized this that they demanded with one voice that he should be called to further duty and further service in that most exalted of all places, in that most responsible and wearing of all positions, the presidency of the United States."

"Unsafe? Who have been his advisers? Who stand as his supporters and admirers? Let me name three of them—three whom all men honor, all men trust—Ellis Root, John Hay, William H. Taft. Is the man unsafe who selects such advisers? It matters little that the man who has figured as chief adviser of the Democratic candidate has advertised that he is now playing a farewell engagement. Even Democrats would be glad to know that their candidate if elected would find as worthy and capable advisers."

A STRONG DOCUMENT.

Even His Opponents Say It Is Masterly.

(From the New York World, Dem.)

President Roosevelt's letter of acceptance gives further and stronger proof of his ability, astuteness and capacity for party leadership. It justifies the words used in the World's first open letter, which even some of his supporters thought were exaggerated. It reveals Mr. Roosevelt far more than did his colorless speech of acceptance as a "strong, able, ambitious, resourceful, militant, passionate personality."

The president shows equal acumen and cleverness in emphasizing the strong points in the Republican position and the weak points in the Democratic record. Putting aside the question of sincerity and of strict accuracy and making allowance for the heat and exigency of partisan combat, the letter is extremely clever and likely to prove effective unless corrected and exposed.

Comment upon other portions of Mr. Roosevelt's letter is reserved for other occasions. It should be said at once, however, that he is entitled to credit for frankly giving the voters due notice that in case of his election "we intend in the future to carry on the government in the same way that we have carried it on in the past."

Many inquiries are being made about gymnasium classes and the other work of the Association for the coming year. A booklet giving full details of the work, gymnasium schedules, future plans etc., will be out Oct. 1st. On request a copy of the book will be mailed to any one interested.

Mr. Amos Mills, of Winchester, has taken the position of Asst. Secretary of the Newton Y. M. C. A. He has already made many friends. His time will be given largely to the increasing boys' work.

The Gymnasium classes start Oct. 1st. Mr. LaRose the new instructor will be present at that time. Let every member of the gymnasium be present the first day to greet him. Young men joining the gymnasium classes for the first time should be present at the opening class.

A new feature of the physical work will be a class for boys 9 to 12 years of age which meets twice a week on Tuesday and Thursday at 2:30. Special attention will be given to this class by the physical director. Parents who have boys of this age will be interested in this class. We ask you to visit it and make inquiries concerning the benefits to be derived from it by the younger boys.

The first class for Business men will be held on Saturday October 1st, at 5 p. m. The floor will be reserved however for their special use at 4:30. This will afford extra time for games or special private instruction, yet those who cannot come at the earlier hour will not miss the class instruction which will begin at 5 p. m. It is hoped that all the "old guard" and many new ones will be present to meet Mr. LaRose on Oct. 1st.

Classes in mechanical drawing and penmanship will be conducted this season. Inquire at office for particulars.

The Sixteenth Annual Conference of the Woman's Auxiliary of Massachusetts and Rhode Island will be held in Cambridge at the Association Building, Oct. 11 to 13th. Many ladies and gentlemen prominent in Association work will speak at this conference. Z. C. Collins, the army secretary of this state will tell of his work among the soldiers. Further particulars can be obtained from the president, Mrs. A. F. Emery or the secretary Mrs. J. W. Brigham or at the Association office.

The first meeting of the Women's Auxiliary will be held on Wednesday, Oct. 26, at 3 p. m. The September meeting is postponed until that date. It would be easy to double the membership of the Association if every member would bring in one other. Do your part.

While canoeing at Newton Upper Falls Sunday afternoon, two Newton young men had a narrow escape from drowning in the Charles River. They attempted to shoot the rapids below the silk mill dam, but the canoe swamped in the river, which had risen nearly two feet in the last two days. Neither could swim, but they were rescued by the metropolitan park police officers stationed at the Hemlock gorge reservation, near Echo bridge.

TRIPLE CELEBRATION.

First Church in Newton Enters its New Building.

A Week of Religious, Social and Historical Services.

The venerable First Church in Newton, with its long and honorable history, has had a triple celebration this week. This year, which marks the 240th anniversary of its founding, the tenth anniversary of its pastorate of Rev. Edward M. Noyes, also includes the dedication of its new and beautiful house of worship.

The exercises began last Friday evening with a preparatory lecture, were continued Sunday with the formal dedication, communion and fellowship services, followed by a reception to the pastor and wife on Wednesday, and after a fellowship service for the village of Newton Centre, this evening, will conclude next Sunday with an historical service, Sunday School Rally and Christian Endeavor Rally.

The dedication service last Sunday attracted an audience, which included representatives from the entire city, and crowded the beautiful auditorium to the very doors.

The program was in excellent taste, bearing a fine cut of the church on the front cover, and a smaller and different view of the structure on the back cover. The program gives the exercises for the entire week, and brief facts regarding the history of the church, its ministers and items of interest relating to the new building.

plans we desire to place a suitable memorial to Dr. and Mrs. Furber in the North transept window. We anticipate that a new and adequate organ will be installed during the next year.

"This church is the material expression of the christian faith and self-sacrifice of all these people. In behalf of every one who has given of his time or his money for the erection of this church, speaking for the building committee, I deliver to you—the legal representative of this organization—the keys of the building and the control of the property."

Mr. Burton Payne Gray, Chairman of the Prudential Committee, in accepting the keys said:

"As the representative of the First Church in Newton, Massachusetts, and in its behalf, I accept this property, this beautiful structure, and for the church I promise it shall be used only for those purposes which will extend the kingdom of Christ on earth, and for the worship of Almighty God."

At the conclusion of the services, the audience was invited to inspect the building.

The new building is a noteworthy example of a fine old type of architecture, the English village church. In plan it is the shape of a Roman cross—the usual English church plan.

tracery with each member the connected outgrowth of the parts below, the designer has followed the methods of the famous craftsmen of the Golden Age of glass, the result being, that while each opening is enriched by a canopy border, or frame, the whole window is tied together by the brilliant white glass of which the canopies are made, making it a connected whole. In the three central second tier openings are figures, "The Saviour," with "The Good Shepherd" and "The Sower" on either cloak and toilet-rooms, and an additional classroom.

The extreme dimensions of the building are 161 by 97 feet. The auditorium is 60 by 96 feet, and the Sunday-school room is 33 by 56 feet. This room extends up through two stories, with an open timber roof, making it a lofty and imposing hall, overlooked by galleries, one at each end. Heating is by steam and ample provision has been made for ventilation.

The new church was authorized side. These are carried out with all possible choice of color, while the field in each of the other panels is in leaded patterns taken from old examples. Strong color is again introduced in the emblems enclosed in circles, which form the features in the seven panels of the lower tier. The inscription reads: "To the glory of God, and in memory of James T. Walworth and Elizabeth C. Walworth, Filiius gratius possit 1904."

The plan of the architects to have a continuity of design in the stained glass has been followed in the window erected by Miss Cousins to the mem-

May 23, 1903; the corner stone was laid Sept. 9, 1903, and the building was completed July 30, 1904. The cost has been $107,100 and the total subscriptions were $107,974.67. The architects are Shepley, Ruten and Coolidge of Boston, and the builders are Horton and Hemenway of Boston Providence and Washington. The decoration of the auditorium was done by L. Haberstroh and Son of Boston.

The Building Committee were Charles E. Kelsey, Chairman, William E. Shedd, Treasurer, Henry Bailey, Secretary, George B. Baker, Josiah M. Dill, Norman H. George, Hon. A. L. Harwood, Daniel T. Kidder, Edw. McLellan, Rev. E. M. Noyes, Irving C. Paul, Abner K. Pratt, Albert A. Tynes, Arthur C. Walworth and John Ward.

Two interesting facts were noted among others in connection with the history of the Church. The clock which adorns the front of the gallery has the following inscription: "John Rogers, Newton, Made and Gave It, 1761." The bible used on the new pulpit which was given by the Isaac Kingsbury family, bears an inscription showing that it was a gift to the church in 1845 by John Kingsbury, the father of Isaac Kingsbury.

A STUDY IN FIGURES.

It is an old saying that figures do not lie, and whether or not the statement is absolutely true, the fact remains that figures do at times give information which it is difficult to refute. The present campaign in the 12th Congressional district has given an opportunity for an inquiring mind to study figures relating to elections, with the result that some thoughtful voters are now asking themselves the question, "Is it wise for the voters of the district to allow themselves, by any so called slogan of 'Norfolk for Norfolk,' to be influenced to support a candidate who in his own town has polled much less than the normal Republican vote in previous elections?"

The following figures are interesting from this point of view:

Town of Foxborough.
Election of 1902.
Governor..... Bates..... 292
Congress..... Powers..... 125
Senator..... Bond..... 106
Election of 1903.
Governor..... Bates..... 290
Senator..... Bond..... 106
Election of 1904.
Governor..... Bates..... 290
Senator..... Bond..... 106

From the above figures, it appears that Foxborough Republicans in 1902 saw no objection to a Newton man as representative in Congress, but gave him a plurality of 111 over the Democratic nominee, while in the same election Mr. Howes, the Democratic nominee for state Senator, a Brookline candidate, received only 28 votes less than the gentleman from Foxborough, who in his turn received 47 less than the Congressional candidate from Newton and 54 less than Governor Bates, who led the Democratic nominee by 110.

In 1903, an off year in which nearly everything is taken for granted, the "locality argument" did not appeal to the Foxborough Republicans, who cast 40 more votes for Governor Bates than were cast for the Foxborough candidate for reelection to the state Senate. If the locality claim for preference does not appeal to a candidate's fellow townsmen, why should that argument be expected to appeal to the county at large?

Figures do not lie, but how can they be explained?—Brookline Chronicle.

The attack upon the character of Newton's candidate for Congress, ex-
-mavor John W. Weeks by Michael J.
Fanning has been the feature of the campaign during the present week.

Mr. Fanning states "that no man outside the Legislature was more influential for the ruin side than Captain Weeks." This item will be news indeed to the people of this city, who have known and honored Mr. Weeks in religious, political and social circles for the past twelve years. He has passed through the seething cal-dron of a hot municipal election without smooch or stain, and with no hint of the awful flaw which Mr. Fanning has just discovered. He has been honored with many confidential and important positions in the state and nation without protest and with many expressions of approval.

But it remains for Mr. Michael J.
Fanning, a comparative stranger in this city, to declare to the Twelfth Congressional district, in the interests of his friend, Senator Bemis, that Capt Weeks, honored by city,
state and nation, is a foe to temperance and an unfit man to sit in the halls of Congress.

The only answer to such fabrics of a disordered imagination is to loyally support Captain Weeks in the approaching primaries.

There are many republicans in this city who are envying their brethren in Wards one, five and seven upon their opportunity next Tuesday to help bury the Bemis sentiment in the community under an avalanche of ballots. Captain Weeks will receive a royal support in Newton, and show
the rest of the district that the recent scurrilous attacks upon him are not given credence in his own home.

The eight hundred persons who attended the dedication exercises of the First Church last Sunday were greatly disturbed by the noise of the trolley on Homer street. These tracks should be removed before another spring arrives.

The Massachusetts Anti-Saloon League repudiates the use of its stationary by its superintendent for political letters.

The brown tail moth will own the city next spring unless active steps are taken this winter to exterminate the pest.

The political pot will boil the highest next week.

Brilliant Reception.

The social features in connection with the dedication and anniversary services at the First Church, Newton Centre, culminated last Wednesday evening in a reception to the pastor and his bride. Although there was a large number present, conservatively estimated at 500, the spacious rooms were never crowded.

The general decoration scheme was red and green, fall flowers, such as hydrangeas and salvia being used with fine effect in connection with potted palms, ferns and asparagus vine.

Rev. and Mrs. Noyes were assisted in receiving from 8 to 10 by Madame Noyes, the throng of guests being well handled by a corps of ushers under direction of Mr. William H. Rice.
The receiving party stood in the ladies parlor, in a bower formed of potted palms and ferns.

The Misses Damon of Dover, with piano, violin and cornet provided the music and down stairs in the dining room a bevy of young ladies assisted in serving refreshments.

The success of the reception is due to the hard work of the ladies Mrs.
William E. Shedd being chairman of the general committee, Mrs. Norman H. George, being in charge of the music and decorations and Mrs. Elizabeth G. Heald having charge of the refreshments.

Police Paragraphs.

The name of the Italian who was killed last week Thursday night by falling into the railroad depression at Newton is said to be Cesare Cavicchi of Weymouth Hills. Identification was made from two money order receipts found in his clothes.

Coming Attractions

Keith's Theatre—There will be a number of entertainers new to the patrons of Keith's Boston Theatre appearing during the week of Sept.
26. The list includes the Carter de Haven sextet, which was one of the big feature specialties, with beautiful electric light effects Charles Hera, a skilful jugglar, who is making his first appearance in America; and the Ford Sisters, two of the most graceful dancers in the varieties. Among the better known vaudeville entertainers are Sager Midgeley and Gertrude Carlisle, who will present one of their charming "Sammie and Sarah" sketches, the three Keatons, including "Buster," the most amusing midget comedian on the stage. Allen Shaw, expert coin manipulator, and Dorothy Keaton, a charming and talented banjoist. It goes without saying that the operatic prima donna who has been scoring such a pronounced hit this week will be retained for another six days, but she will render an entire new selection of songs.

Tremont Theatre—It will be with genuine regret that patrons of the Tremont Theatre hear the announcement of the beginning of the last two weeks of the remarkably successful
Ade-Luders' opera, "The Sho-Gun."
The closing fortnight begins next Monday evening, and after this week but sixteen more performances of this delightful opera will be given in Boston. It is doubtful whether any piece of a similar kind has scored such a great and unlimited success here as has "The Sho-Gun." The Tremont has been packed during the past five weeks of the engagement, and the outlook is for a continuation of this condition during the remaining two weeks. The farewell night will be on Saturday, October 8th, and after leaving here the production will be taken directly to Wallack's Theatre, New York. So far as Boston is concerned, George Ade, Gustav Luders, Henry W. Savage, and George F. Marion, the general stage director, have scored a big success in their endeavors to produce an opera that resembles what theatregoers were accustomed to in the old days,
and there can be no question but what their development of "The Sho-Gun" is a triumph in every particular.

Majestic Theatre—"Resurrection,"
a drama in four acts, made from Count Leo Tolstoy's novel by Henri Bataille, English translation by Michael Morton had its first Boston presentation at the Majestic Theatre last Monday and will play its second and last week commencing next Monday. The Boston Post said: "Never before in this city has Miss Walsh reached such a degree of histrionic excellence, such careful reading and so thorough a grasping of a character, as in Maslova. She is certainly to be commended, and it must be a source of gratification to her as it certainly is to her friends."

One of the largest theatrical movements ever made by steamboat in this country was made by the Wright Lorimer Company on Saturday Sept.
17th, when that organization, 187 strong, left by the Joy Line steamer direct for Boston where Mr. Lorimer opens his season on Oct. 3rd. Aside from the actors the boat carried 23
wagon loads of scenery and upwards of 225 trunks containing costumes and properties for "The Shepherd King." The production was specially insured for this Boston movement in the amount of $75,000, the premium upon which amounted to more than $2000. The company will rehearse at the Majestic Theatre in Boston previous to opening his season there.

Real Estate.

Henry H. Read has leased the following houses the past week:

Mrs. F. G. B. Morris's house, number 23 Glenwood avenue, Newton Centre, to Harry A. Cook of Boston, who will occupy at once.

Mr. Joseph W. Moore's house, number 83 Forest street, Newton Highlands, to Mr. R. L. B. Adams of Boston.

A Piano Opportunity.

Any of our readers who have contemplated purchasing a piano will do well to write immediately for a list of the bargains offered by the Ivers and Pond Piano Co. Over 100 pianos of various makes and grades
are to be sold at once at bargain prices. Easy payment plans to suit all purses. Catalogue and bargain lists may be had by writing the Ivers and Pond Co., 114 Boylston St., Boston.

All the Poor Richards of New England are invited by The Boston Herald to get out their almanacs and enter its Proverb Contest just launched. Every evening an illustration is published which represents some old, well known proverb. The prizes for correct solutions range in value from a residence lot worth $2000 to a $5 check, and include autos, pianos, and other valuable articles.

RECIPROCITY.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge to Speak

Reception and Banquet at the Newton Club.

Elaborate preparations are being made for the reception and dinner to Senator Henry Cabot Lodge next Monday. President John W. Weeks will be the toastmaster and speeches are expected from Senator Lodge and Congressman Powers. Mr.
Lodge will discuss the Kannon treaties and reciprocity. Congressmen McCall and Lawrence of Massachusetts and Congressman D. J. Foster of Vermont are also expected to be present.

—Cards have been issued this week
by Mr. and Mrs. J. Frederick Ramsdell for the wedding of their sister Miss Lucy M. A. Stiles to Mr.
Thomas Wilson Canmay of West
Newton the ceremony to take place
Tuesday evening, Sept. 27th at 8 o'clock, at 10 Riverside street, Watertown.

—An automobile driven by Mr.
James E. Morse of Channing street came to grief yesterday afternoon in front of the street railway barn on Washington street West Newton. Mrs.
Morse and Mrs. Daiger who were riding with Mr. Morse were thrown out and Mrs. Daiger rendered unconscious for a time. Mr. Morse and Miss Daiger remained in the machine, which was badly damaged, although they were comparatively unharmed.

Some time Tuesday night a window was forced in the rear of the Library and the drawers in the delivery and other rooms on the upper floor were ransacked by thieves. Mr. G. P.
Atkins grocery store was also entered through the transom over the back door. In the Library nothing was taken but in Mr. Atkins' store a trifling sum was missed from the cash drawer. The police consider that the work was that of boys or amateurs.

Wonderful Cleanliness.

There is an article on the market which certainly is without a peer as a cleanser. We refer to that wonderful purifier, Cabot's Sulpho-Naphthol.
What a blessing to be rid of all the cheap inferior deodorants; what a saving of time, money and annoyance to have a cleaner, (Sulpho-Napthol) with disinfecting—germ killing
—as well as deodorizing—odor destroying—properties. What a feeling of safety, for the old articles left the work of disease-producing organisms go on unnoticed under their strong odors. Sulpho-Naphthol destroys the germs and their deadly productions.

ANNOUNCEMENT EXTRAORDINARY

TRUSTEE'S SALE AT PUBLIC AUCTION

At the Mansion House on the Premises

Saturday, Oct. 1, 1904, at 2 o'clock P. M.

of the very desirable property formerly known as the

A. W. NICKERSON ESTATE

but more recently owned by

Mr. JOHN E. SEARLES

(formerly Treasurer of the Sugar Trust)

IN MARION, MASS.

Rarely is the opportunity offered of buying by auction any property on the shores of Buzzards Bay, and never before at such a sale one of the magnitude and value as here presented. The Town's Assessors estimate the area as being

OVER 1000 ACRES, ABOUT 5 MILES OF SHORE

The Estate is covered largely with an exceedingly handsome forest, through which wind about nine miles of charming private drives. The buildings comprise a large deed given by Nelson P. Libby and Fred A. Larson to Edwin Field, dated April 4, 1898, recorded with Middlesex (South District) Deeds, Libro 297 Folio 314, and for breach of the condition in said mortgage continued, will be sold at public auction on the premises hereinafter described, on TUESDAY, the eighteenth day of October, A. D. 1904, at four o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular the premises by said mortgage deed conveyed, and therein described substantially as follows, viz:—
A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon situated in that part of Newton called West Newton, and being lot numbered Two (2) as shown on a plan of land on Cherry Street in West Newton belonging to Eda G. Mannix, dated August 19, 1898, H. E. D. Jefferson, Surveyor, and recorded with Middlesex (South District) Deeds, End of Record Book 292, and bounded and further described as follows, viz:—Northwesterly by Cherry Street, fifty feet; Northwesterly by lot numbered three (3) on said plan, one hundred (100) feet; Southeasterly by land now or late of Harris, fifty (50) feet; and Southwesterly by lot numbered one (1) on said plan, one hundred (100) feet. Containing 9980 square feet of land.
Said premises will be sold and conveyed subject to any and all unpaid taxes or assessments.
TERMS:—Two hundred (200) dollars of the purchase money to be paid in cash, balance in ten days at the office of the undersigned, of whom further inquiries may be made.
GEO. ROYAL PILSENER, Trustee
under the will of said Edwin Field, mortgagor, and the present holder of said mortgage.
Boston, September 21, 1904.
113-117 Bartrons Hall, Massachusetts.

This property is likely to be purchased at a price which will tempt the most conservative investor, and the time devoted to a careful examination of the property and attendance at the sale will be profitably expended. $2000 must be paid in cash at time and place of sale. For further particulars and for permit to examine, apply to

A RIGHTEOUS MAN.

Sermon by Rev. Samuel E. Herrick, D. D.

At Dedication of First Church in Newton.

II Timothy 2:19—Nevertheless the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal: The Lord knoweth them that are His, and, Let everyone that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity.

It is a comfort sometimes to look at the North star, and to be reminded, amidst all the uncertainties by which we are confronted, that some things are certain. Such is the suggestion of this "Nevertheless" of the apostle. Evidently, Hymenaeus and Philetus were causing a good deal of mental perturbation among the Christians at Ephesus. They had started some disturbing speculations, about the resurrection and other matters. These questions were diverting men from the main business of Christianity, which was, and is, to make men better here and now—resurrection or no resurrection; to bring God nearer to men, and men nearer to God, and to help them depart from unrighteousness. Of course, when speculative questions arise in a Christian community and set all thought in a ferment, nothing is more natural than for the Christian minister to think that he must take a hand in the business, and control, or at least guide, the course of his people's cogitation. Perhaps Timothy thought so. Sometimes this may be wise; oftener, probably, it is not.

At any rate, St. Paul, who had placed Timothy in charge of the Ephesian church, hints to him that he would better stick to the things which are of indubitable certainty. There are some things, Timothy, which are not open to debate; for example, Faithful is the saying,—If we died with Him, if we shall also live with Him; if we endure, we shall also reign with Him; we shall deny Him, He also will deny us; if we are faithless, He abideth faithful, for He cannot deny Himself. Of these things put them in remembrance, charging them, in the sight of the Lord, that they strive not about words, to no profit. Shun profane and vulgar babblings, remembering that there is a foundation which standeth sure. It has this seal, "The Lord knoweth them that are His, and, Let everyone that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity." As if he had said, Busy yourself and keep your people busy with these great verities of the Gospel which bear upon life and personal character, and let the foam of common babble drift and die, where it will, and as it will.

In some things the times have not changed very much since the words were written eighteen hundred years ago. The babble goes on,—like the surf upon the shingle—drifting up like windbeaten foam, now about this subject and now about that. The Hymenaeuses and the Philetuses would almost make one think that the universe is circling about some questions that they have started, and that unless these are settled in accordance with their wise prevision of the truth, the kingdom of God itself must come to an end in the world. But the Hymenaeuses and the Philetuses pass away, and their burning questions are forgotten,—dead as last year's cinders, and the kingdom of God abides. The Lord knoweth them that are His, and they that have named the name of Christ are still trying to depart from iniquity, and are measurably succeeding.

Upheaval and revolution in the realm of speculative thought do not necessarily affect the domain of real character. The kingdom of God is concerned, not with speculation, or investigation, or discovery, but with what men themselves substantially are. The foundation of God standeth, "He layeth the beams of His chambers in the waters," but the beams do not fluctuate. There are some things about which human authority and human judgment are always on the move; there are other things about which he must always be quiescent; anchored steadfastly, with no conceivable possibility of transition or evolution. As the author of the Epistle to the Hebrews says, "Certain things, which cannot be shaken, will remain." As St. John says in one of his epistles, "He that doeth the will of God abideth forever."

"This so." Through all the revolutions of human history, there has been no essential change in the ideal of a righteous man. All other ideals have changed. Everything else has changed. But a righteous man is the same thing today that he was in the days of Abraham or Noah. Glance backward for an instant through the century which has just closed upon us. How many times within the memory of most of those who are present have our religious foundations seemed about to be shaken. How often have men feared and trembled for the "Ark of God." At the beginning of that century there was no question among good people generally that the world was created in six literal days of twenty-four hours each, by a series of mechanical acts on the part of a great outstanding man; the world was moulded as the housewife moulds a loaf of bread. Then came Geology, telling the story of creation in an entirely different way, and men said the foundations of God were being broken up. And so they set about trying to bolster up God's foundations for him; trying somehow to make Genesis square with Geology, and bungling work they made of it. The two things would not square at all. And finally they were compelled to allow that possibly neither in Geology nor in Genesis had God been laying His foundations for the Kingdom which could not be moved. But throughout all the confusion—in which good men were vehemently opposed to each other in their theories of world-building—there was one thing upon which they were all agreed, and that was the kind of character which was acceptable with God. "The Lord knoweth them that are His, and, Let them that name the name of Christ depart from iniquity." Then came Darwin and his theory of evolution, and the wonderful discoveries of biology,—utterly revolutionizing, not only religious traditions, but all the scientific conceptions of the origin and progress of life on the planet; and men said once more, that not only were the foundations which God had laid being broken up, but the very foundations for man's faith in any God at all were being dissolved; and that the universe must be regulated to atheism, or at least to pantheism. And yet through it all, there was no change in the ideal conception of righteousness. The questions evidently had no very important bearing upon fundamental duty, or upon the chief end and aim of man's existence.

And then later, and within the memory of the youngest, there have arisen, within all religious sects and denominations, those questions of criticism, which have shaken all the old theories of inspiration; subjecting the structure of written revelation to a sifting and winnowing which has left us all in suspense as to any fixed scheme or theory. And yet nobody is in any suspense at all concerning what Christianity is, or what a Christian should be; that is, concerning the ideal which is obligatory upon universal manhood.

Now here is a little poem which I find in an old collection of Oriental literature. It will not take two minutes to read it, and I am going to read it to you. Some of you will probably recollect having seen it. Possibly some of you learned it, as I did in childhood,—along with Longfellow's Psalm of Life, and other things which have stuck in your memory through all the years. Here it is:

Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful.

But his delight is in the law of the Lord; and in His law doth he meditate day and night.

And he shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his leaf also shall not wither, and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper.

The ungodly are not so; but are like the chaff which the wind driveth away.

Therefore the ungodly shall not stand in the judgment, nor sinners in the congregation of the righteous.

For the Lord knoweth the way of the righteous; but the way of the ungodly shall perish.

Now where did that come from? Nobody knows; least of all the man who says he knows. For more than five hundred years scholars have differed widely as to its authorship. David, Solomon, Josiah, Jeremiah, Ezra, Alexander Jannaeus and many others have been named, and men today are as much in the dark as ever about its human origin. But what does it matter? Who cares who first dug up the Koh-i-noor? We all know it for a priceless gem. The truth is that the Spirit of all life and truth and beauty, from God, produced it; wrought it in the matrix of human thought and feeling and experience, and caused some human tongue to speak, and some human pen to record it. The little song is susceptible of a great deal of comment, but really, for practical purposes, it does not need any comment at all. It is the simplest and most luminous picture possible of a good man. It is character ideally crystallized. The critical questions as to its age and authorship in nowise affect its value.

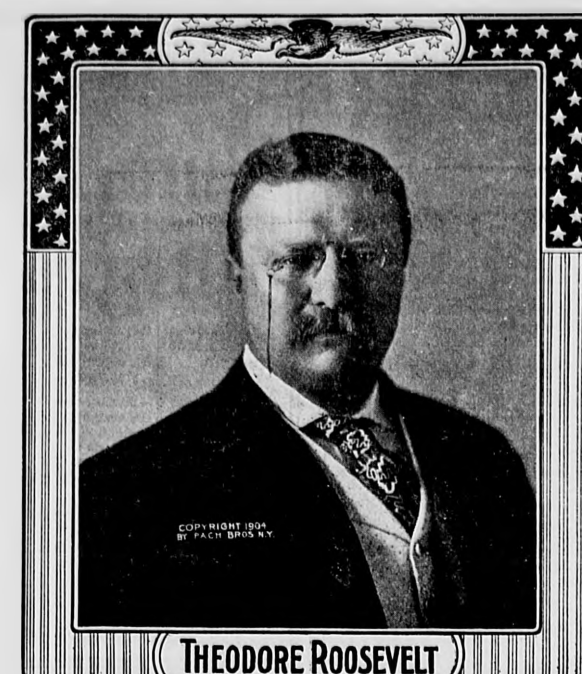

If someone should by and by rise up and say that it does not belong in the Bible at all, and should revise it out of the book altogether, what difference would it make? It would still carry the ideal. "The foundation of God standeth sure." Now I do not know whether St. Paul had this little poem immediately in mind or not, when he wrote his letter to Timothy. It would almost seem that he had. But whether he had or not, it is impossible to ignore the close coincidence between the ideal, sketched in the Psalm and what the apostle is insisting upon. The same lines are conspicuous in both. The only difference is that the Psalmist gives us a concrete picture of a good man, while the apostle describes such a life in the abstract. The apostle draws a fundamental and essential outline. The Psalmist erects a structure; and when the structure stands before you in its completeness you see that his foundation thought is identical with that of the apostle. And what are the lines? First—"The Lord knoweth them that are His," says the apostle. Now that is more than a mere assertion of divine intelligence. Paul never wasted his time in uttering truisms,—things that go without saying. Of course God has intelligence,—all embracing, infinite, comprehensive, and minute. But what Paul asserted was, that God knoweth them that are His, with a recognition of delight and sympathy, as we know those who love and care for the same things that we do; as friend knows friend, approves him and looks upon him with favor. It was a frequent and customary Hebrew use of the word "to know." "The Lord knoweth the days of the upright" (Psalm 37:18). "The Lord knoweth them that trust in Him." (Nah. 1:7). "I know him, that he will command his children and his household after him" (Genesis 18:19). It is to be interested in one, so that you will take care and trouble for him. Now such knowledge carries mutuality, reciprocity. It is never one-sided. The experience of such a knowledge begets an answering knowledge. And so we find this same apostle saying "I know Him whom I have believed."

Here, then, we strike the first fundamental and abiding fact—a personal sympathy which God and the soul are real to each other. There is community of feeling and aim, correspondence of desire and purpose; harmony of intent and will. The heart of God and the heart of the man stand revealed to each other. Such knowledge deepens experience, and such experience extends knowledge. The soul grows ever more and more clear-sighted in what God is; in what God loves; in what God desires for it and for all men. Changing creeds do not trouble it. Theological constructions, and intellectual apprehensions, and metaphysical discriminations, and fine spun dialectics, and perplexing casuistries, rise and pass themselves, and fill the atmosphere, and change and pass away to be replaced by others; but through it all the "Lord knoweth them that are His," and they that are His know Him. This is one mark of the foundation that standeth sure, says Paul. Well, now turn back to the little old Hebrew songs; to the Psalmist's concrete picture of the good man, and what does it say? From away back here, hundreds of years before Paul was heard of, the words come floating down to us, "The Lord knoweth the way of the righteous"—sets His eye upon it with delighted approval. It must abide, because the Lord who knows and loves it abides. This foundation standeth sure; but the way of the unrighteous shall perish; it is like "chaff which the wind driveth away."

But this unchanging thing carries upon it another mark. The foundation is sealed with a double inscription or legend. "The Lord knoweth them that are His" indicates a secret fact that lies down in the depths of personal experience. It is between the soul and its God. There is another token that lies open to the view of all mankind—"Let everyone that nameth the name of the Lord depart from unrighteousness." A life that is on one side street towards God a life that is on the other side open towards men. And on this side which is open towards men, a very notable thing about it is that it is characterized negatively; not so much attainment as by abandonment and renunciation. It is a departure from all unrighteousness. As the apostle elsewhere puts it, it is "putting off the works of darkness."

Perhaps one reason why it is so characterized, is that when questions of life and conduct arise, it is often easier to see and to say what one ought not to do. Eliminate the wrong and the right becomes clear. There are many cases in which an absolute refusal of the wrong is the first step towards the attainment of the right. "Love your enemy." That's hard and high; perhaps you cannot spring up and attain unto it, at the word. But you can at once more easily put your foot down and say, I will not hate him. You can depart from unrighteousness, even though you may not have the instantaneous and requisite degree of spiritual energy to mount to positive righteousness. And this seemed to be a favorite thought and a customary endeavor with the apostle, all through life. Almost at the last we hear him saying, "I count not myself to have attained; but this one thing I do,—forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press towards the mark." And the fairest way to estimate the righteousness of most men's life, I presume, would be to ask, not what attainments in virtue or goodness they have made, but what they have left behind or dropped off; what are the things they have steadfastly refused to do? what unrighteousness they have departed from and got forever beyond. Now if we turn back —The escape of Darious Cobb from serious injuries, if not death, last Friday night was miraculous. By a singular accident he was hurled from the upper entry of his residence, and in pitchy darkness sent headlong down the long stairway, his head striking the wall at the foot. So violent was the blow that the rebound whirled his body around and sent it down a short flight that ran at right angles with the other flight, where it was stopped by violent concussion with the baluster. A deep gash was cut in his leg, and he received severe blows on his side and hip. He was out doors at five o'clock the next morning tending to his garden and was seeing to his business in Boston through the day. He has suffered no pain except that in the morning, after sleeping all night, he feels the effects of the terrible wrench his neck received from the concussion of his head against the wall. Fortunately his wife who has been ill was absent, but the resounding noise of the fall awakened the household. They were prepared to take him either dead or insensible up stairs but he picked himself up and ascended to them as if nothing had happened, their anxiety was set at rest. Mr. Cobb said to a friend that though he has been knocked from street cars and met with other accidents when the skin has been torn from his hips and legs, and his head had to be dressed by a surgeon, he has neither felt pain, nor been in anyway inconvenienced in walk or work. He attributes this to the fact that pure cold water has been his only drink.

Carpets, Rugs, Upholstery

Assortment the Largest, Prices the Lowest for Quality Offered.

Our bargains are made by marking down our own stock to a low price, not by purchasing inferior goods to make an attractive price.

It is a mistake to infer that we carry only high-priced fabrics. We have medium grades as well, and our prices are low because our expenses are proportioned over a volume of business exceeded by few in our specialty in the United States, and equaled by none in New-England.

A Summer's Outing A "Graphic" Man's Experiences in Europe

Naples, August 15th, 1904.

Dear Graphic: If anybody should ask a member of our party what year it was I should not be surprised if there would be a moment of hesitation to be sure whether it was B. C. or A. D. We have been living so much in the distant past of late, studying the history of antiquity among the ruined temples and palaces, that the present day, particularly of far of America, seems almost a dream. When we left Rome we took the train for Naples and settled down for a long afternoon's ride. The scenery was rather monotonous but as we journeyed south extensive hemp fields were passed and farmers could be seen harvesting this large product. The natives wear but few clothes and the result is that their bodies are the color of parchment and the skin toughened by exposure.

As we approached Naples, Mt Vesuvius loomed up in the far distance, a mass of rugged rock against the sky, red from the afterglow of the setting sun, and from its top drifted slowly away the smoke of the internal fires; a weird and impressive spectacle as seen for the first time. We stopped at Naples for dinner then went on to Cava, a popular mountain resort, for the night. We continued our way the following morning along the beautiful Bay of Salerno and on the edge of the Mountains. Brundisi was reached in the evening where dinner was served and later the steamer was taken for a night's sail across the Ionian sea.

In the early morning the outlines of Albania, which belongs to Turkey, were visible and about seven o'clock Corfu was reached. As several days are to be spent in Greece let me describe the country briefly: The population is about one and a fifth million and the country is in such a bad way financially that the native money is worth only three fourths of its face value. Tilling the soil is the principal occupation and the land, though hilly, has many fine plains and fertile valleys. Barley, wheat, beans and rice are raised in large quantities but the main products are grapes, wine, currants, olives and figs. The costume is most peculiar, until one becomes used to it, and the men wear a white shirt with full sleeves, a leather girdle, a kilt fluted like the dress of a ballet dancer, short breeches, white stockings and shoes turned up at the toe with round fuzzy balls on the end. The women wear the loose jacket and skirt and a cloth headband hanging down about the ears. In their hair and round their necks the women wear strings of coins and the men carry strings of beads which are not used for religious purposes but to supply a mechanical occupation for the hands during conversation. Greek art dates back many centuries and is identified with such men as Pericles, Alexander, Caesar, Phidias, Praxiteles and others.

At Corfu we began to get the wonderful color effects for which this country is noted. The sea is a deep indigo blue and the mountains are many shades of brown, their rocky sides turning to purple as the sun goes down and the after glow comes on.

Before our boat came to anchor peddlers and fakirs swarmed over the side and made life miserable for some of the passengers in their efforts to dispose of their wares, we were rowed ashore and climbing the Asencione or lookout point went through a grove of olive trees, some of them probably over 1000 years old, to a rock where an extensive view was had of the bay and the mountains beyond. Continuing our way by train to Petras, the great centre of the currant trade, our party finally reached Corinth, a straggling little town built 60 years ago, after the earthquake which destroyed the old town farther inland. We drove to the former site where excavations have been going on the past three years under the direction of the American School at Athens, and our leader informed us that this was the place where the letter came which was written by Paul to the Corinthians.

The ruins of the temple are among the oldest monuments of the Doric style and there are still standing five columns on the West side and two on the south side; the remaining columns having fallen. The temple was dedicated to Apollo and is impressive and solid in style. As we continued our journey the inhabitants of a village were seen threshing grain and at one station we saw a funeral procession entering a church. The present custom dates back to 600 B. C. the time of Solon the great law giver of Athens. The body is exposed propped up in the coffin and all the mourners walk, one of them carrying the coffin lid like a banner. The priests wear long black gowns and tall funnel shaped hats with a button shaped arrangement on top they wear their hair long, done up in a French twist, and long beards.

At Athens our party found shelter under the roof of the Grand Hotel in the Place de la Constitution which is on the principal square opposite the royal palace. The first morning in the city and on several other occasions we visited the Acropolis, a rocky plateau rising precipitously to a height of about 500 feet above sea level. It was the earliest seat of the Athenian kings who sat in judgment and assembled their councils but later the judicial and popular assemblies were removed to the lower town and the Acropolis was devoted solely to the gods. At the time of Solon this became the centre of civilization and in the Parthenon, which was built under the direction of Pericles, the treasury of Greece was located. This most perfect monument of ancient art was dedicated in 438 B. C. to the goddess Athena, and is a Doric temple originally having 62 large and 36 small columns and a frieze 524 feet in length. The interior or Cella was the Sanctuary proper and was divided into two unequal parts, in one of which was the celebrated gold and ivory statue of the goddess, the work of Phidias, and 39 feet high. This sculptor also did or superintended the wonderful sculptures of the Pediments which are the most important now in existence. The roof is gone but many of the columns are still standing a mute witness to a long departed glory.

Other places of interest on the Acropolis are the Temple of Athena Nike, the Propylaea built like the other buildings of Pentelic marble, the Erechtheion, Portico of the Caryatides and the museum which is full of sculptured remains gathered on the hill during the excavations. One afternoon we took carriages to the Andronikos, an octagonal tower of marble formerly used for a sun dial, weather cock and in stormy weather or at night the time was ascertained by water running into a grooved arrangement on the floor. The old market near by built by Julius Caesar and Augustus was of interest as was also the Ceramicus or old burial ground outside the gate, and dating back for more than 2500 years. From there we went to the Theseion, a small temple and the best preserved in Greece, and to a circular room, hewn from the solid rock of one of the hills, where it is said Socrates was imprisoned and where he took the fatal cup of hemlock.

On the hill of the Pryt, Pericles made his speeches, the populace gathering in the valley below. and on the Areopagus or Mars hill, opposite, St. Paul spoke of the unknown God as described in the 17th chapter of the book of the acts. At another time we went to the theatre of Dionysos, the cradle of Greek dramatic art, where the plays of Aeschylus, Euripides and Sophocles were presented, the arch of the Emperor Hadrian, the Temple of Jupiter, the museum and the Stadion, on the site of the old one, a magnificent marble structure built recently through the generosity of a Greek gentleman at a cost of over a half million. The seating capacity is fifty thousand, and the seats were all taken at the World's Olympic games held there in 1896.

After we left Athens four delightful days were enjoyed in a sailing trip, our headquarters being on a specially arranged steamer chartered by the bureau. The nights were spent on board, everyone sleeping on deck, and the days in visiting places of interest on shore. We first went through the Saronic gulf by Salamis and Aegina to Nauplia in Peloponnesus where train was taken to Mycenae and Tyrinus, both noted for their ancient ruins. The state prisons are at Nauplia and on an island, a short distance away, the executioner, who is a criminal, lives with a guard of soldiers for companions. The next day was spent in a mule and carriage ride, up among the hills and by several quaint and primitive towns of sun dried brick and tiled roofs to Delphi, 2130 feet above sea level. We had lunch under the trees, drank water from the Castalian fountain and visited the ruined relics of departed glory.

The following day was spent at Olympia, famous in the past for its athletic games and considerable time was consumed in the museum where our leader showed us the restored pediments of the temple, the famous statue of Hermes by the sculptor Praxiteles and considered the most perfect expression of manly beauty left us by antiquity. We had a good opportunity to rest during the 36 hours sail across the Ionian sea to Syracuse in Sicily and there visits were made to the site where the contest took place between the natives and the Athenians, the underground passages and the fort. On the way to Naples two days were spent in the quaint hill town of Taormina and a few hours at Messina, famous for its oranges and lemons, and where the boat was taken to Naples located on the beautiful bay of the same name. During our visit in this southern city drives were taken about the streets and adjoining hills and a trip to Pompeii where excavations have disclosed about one half of the town and probably the most important part.

Wandering through the deserted and narrow streets, paved with large blocks of lava, the places of greatest importance are the theatre, forum, house of Pausa, house of the Vettii, house of the Fann, villa of Diomedes, the Museum and the street of the tombs. It gives the visitor a better realization of the wonders of nature when he lingers amid the ruins of this provincial town, destroyed in 79 A. D. and can look upward to hoary towering Vesuvius still standing in much the same form and size and sending out clouds of black sulphurous smoke as it did in the long distant past. In the national museum were many relics from Pompeii and Herculaneum including statuary, paintings, bronzes, mosaics, tickets, dice, ornaments and samples of food, charred but in an excellent state as regards shape and size. Among other exhibits are the famous Farnese Hercules and Bull, statuary from the baths of Caracalla at Rome, and the Farnese Flora. A visit to the mountainous island of Capri with its wonderful blue grotto and attractive walks is among the nearby attractions and one should, if possible, go to Sorrento, Herculaneum and ascend the volcano Vesuvius.

I will add a postscript to this letter written in Naples and complete the series of rambling sketches of my summer's outing. Our party sailed for home from Naples on the Hohenzollern of the North German Lloyd line and after a pleasant passage through the Mediterranean sea we arrived at Gibraltar, England's impenetrable fortress, the rocky gallery looming up 1400 feet in the air. We landed from boats and going through the gate in the wall, which is 40 feet thick, took carriages for a ride about the quaint and cosmopolitan old town.

There are 5,000 English troops stationed here and of the 24,000 inhabitants 10,000 are Spanish, 200 are Moors and the rest are a mixture of almost all the nations on the globe. The Moors make a striking appearance in their long garments folded and thrown over the shoulder. The men wearing the red turbans are unmarried but those who have on the turbans of white and red twisted together have taken unto themselves wives. Our long string of carriages went by the market, the Jew's quarter, the Roman Catholic church, the English cathedral, formerly the property of the Moors and 1400 years old to the parade ground where is a fine bust of General Eliott who took Gibraltar for the English nation. The dry dock which is being built by the government was of interest as was also a place on the outskirts where the holes in the cliff could be seen, filled, we were told, with 500 guns. At this point was the neutral ground and beyond, near the foothills, a Spanish town was located.

The remainder of our voyage home was comparatively calm and uneventful with the exception of a few hours' view of the Azores, attractive tropical islands, and the Captain's dinner the last night at sea with its toasts and speeches and a dance following on deck decorated for the occasion with flags, bunting and Japanese lanterns. Everyone expressed themselves as having had a good time, an instructive and profitable summer's outing and we parted in New York glad to be on our native shore and more convinced than ever that America is the one and only land for a Yankee to select for a permanent residence.

Let me state in closing that the Bureau of University Travel did all and more than is stated in their agreement and I have to thank Prof. Powers and his able assistants for making my outing so pleasant as well as valuable from an educational standpoint.

EARTH'S TRIBULATIONS AND HEAVEN'S COMPENSATIONS.

A HYMN.

I know we cannot be alone,
With Jesus Christ our guest,
And if the Holy Spirit's near,
He'll calm the troubled breast.

Oh may that Spirit round us dwell
And never from us part,
For He alone can guard us here
And purify the heart.

What are the things that bind us here
To sorrow, sin and loss?
O break them all, my Saviour dear,
And bring us to thy cross.

From all these dazzling things of earth
Our hearts forever free,
And let us nothing here possess,
That draws us, Lord, from Thee.

THE NATURAL HISTORY CORNER.

Now that we are passing again through the gate of the Autumnal Equinox, Sept. 23d, from the summer half to the winter half of the year, it is very interesting to note the kindly helping provision made in nature for all who dearly love summer and its mornings and bid good bye for awhile to both with regret.

By reason of the varying velocity of the earth at different parts of its annual circuit round the sun, and the varying angle made by the apparent daily path of the sun across the sky with the earth's equator, as can be seen by comparing the "ecliptic" with the equator on a map of the world, or on a globe, the natural sun days from one noon to the next are not exactly equal.

Time is accordingly kept by an imaginary "mean," or average sun of uniform apparent motion.

Now, to come to our happy point, the real, and the mean sun are the same about August thirty-first and December twenty-fourth, while in the interval between these dates the real sun is ahead of the mean sun that governs our clocks. This difference increases from August 31st, to November 2d, when the actual sun rises sixteen minutes before the mean, or clock sun. After this date, the difference gradually diminishes till December 24th.

Hence morning lovers find with pleasure the early daylight all through September, October and November, when it is most welcome and convenient for all natural and good purposes: also the rapidly shortening afternoons. After that, we contentedly resign ourselves to the short cold days of settled winter, the natural season of rest for gardens and trees and equally for man, and to its refreshing delights; which except for occasional wholesome variety nothing can excel.

True home is blessed foretaste here
Of home eternal in the skies;
Its fireside of this life the light,
As there heaven's throne to angel eyes.

RECIPROCITY.

Senator Lodge Speaks at the Newton Club.

States His Position on this Question Clearly and Forcibly.

The social as well as the political event of the week, was the dinner to Senator Henry Cabot Lodge at the Newton Club last Monday night. Under the presidency of Hon. John W. Weeks, the Club has inaugurated a series of discussion on live topics of the day, and last year two interesting meetings were held. The meeting Monday evening was the first for the present season and 190 gentlemen were present to hear the junior senator of the Commonwealth speak on Reciprocity. Previous to the dinner a reception was held in the library with President Weeks, Senator Lodge and Congressman Powers and Butler Ames on the receiving line. A corps of ushers, comprising some of the most prominent men in the city acted as ushers under the leadership of Mr. Chas. E. Hatfield. Among them were noticed Hon. Henry E. Cobb, Hon. John A. Fenno, Hon. E. L. Pickard, Senator W. F. Dana, Representatives E. W. Warren and J. A. Lowell, Aldermen C. E. Riley, C. S. Dennison, G. H. Ellis, Fred Johnson, G. H. Mellen, Col. A. M. Ferris, Col. J. G. White, Col. W. L. Sanborn, Col. E. H. Haskell, C. J. Bailey, M. E. Cobb, J. L. Richards, F. L. Nagle, W. H. Allen, J. R. Carter, G. P. Bullard, C. W. Leonard, Geo. Hutchinson, H. P. Converse, F. J. Hale, G. F. Simpson, A. C. Walworth, W. C. Brooks, J. W. French, W. H. Emerson and C. F. Avery.

At the head table were President Weeks, Senator Lodge, Congressman Powers and Ames, Senator Dana, Representatives Warren and Lowell, Col. A. M. Ferris, Col. E. H. Haskell, J. Richard Carter, C. E. Hatfield, A. C. Walworth, J. L. Richards, Hon. H. E. Cobb, A. B. Cobb, Col. Wolfe of St. Louis, Robert Winsor of Boston and Hon. Dana Malone of Greenfield. At the other tables were noticed Aldermen Riley, Dennison, Carter, Ellis, Johnson, Mellen and White, Dr. O. E. Hunt, Dr. G. H. Wilkins, Hon. E. L. Pickard, Hon. H. R. Skinner, Rev. A. J. Hudson, Col. W. L. Sanborn, Col. J. G. White, Hon. J. A. Fenno, M. O. Adams, Col. F. B. Stevens, Dr. H. C. Spencer, Dr. E. E. Hopkins, F. J. Hale, W. M. Flanders, D. C. Heath, H. H. Carter, J. W. French, W. E. Baldwin, W. H. Allen, W. C. Richardson, W. J. Follett, E. A. Phippen, C. F. Avery, Jarvis Lamson, G. P. Simpson, D. S. Emery, W. P. Hammett, C. E. Stearns, Col. Ephraim Stearns, R. G. Elkins, R. S. Gorham, G. S. Smith, N. H. George, W. M. Ferris, George S. Parker, G. W. Bishop, D. G. Wing, C. D. Burrage, W. F. Garcelon, F. H. Loveland, W. B. H. Dowse, A. T. Lovett, H. N. Sweet, T. W. Proctor, N. C. Whitaker, C. E. Hellen, L. D. Towle, G. A. Page, Joseph Byers, J. W. Byers, H. W. Dunn, A. E. Gill, O. W. Walker, J. H. Eddy, P. W. Carter, L. R. Spear, M. E. Cobb, W. H. Emerson, W. C. Brooks, G. P. Bullard, F. W. Remick, W. R. King, A. H. Deatur, C. M. Boyd, E. P. Hatch, Geo. Hutchinson, M. C. Hutchinson, C. J. Bailey, E. R. Snow, F. W. Pray, L. H. Bailey, W. S. Slocom, H. L. Carter, S. W. French, J. T. Lodge, F. L. Nagle, G. W. Jewett, S. W. Manning, V. J. Loring, G. J. Barker, W. O. Delano, A. P. Brown, S. W. Jones, H. P. Converse, I. C. Paul, H. M. Davis, Mitchell Wing, C. W. Leonard, J. F. Shaw, G. B. King, W. O. Kyle, G. H. Shapley, C. W. Hamilton, L. L. Hamilton, J. B. Fuller, O. C. Hubbard, C. S. Luitwiler, E. P. Young, J. P. Tenney, L. K. Hallett, E. F. Woods, M. C. Brush, O. M. Fisher, Col. Boone of Georgia, C. T. Pulsifer and others.

After cigars had been lighted following an excellent dinner, during which an orchestra furnished music, President Weeks rapped to order and was greeted with a salvo of cheers and the tune of "When Johnny Comes Marching Home."

President Weeks reminded the club that it was not a political dinner but one of a series of discussions on vital topics. For this occasion the subject of Reciprocity had been selected and would be treated by one of the first scholars in the political life of today.

Senator Lodge was given a magnificent reception, the members rising to their feet and making the hall ring with their applause, while the orchestra played America.

Senator Lodge delivered a masterly address, which was listened to with great interest and with frequent applause at his telling periods.

He said in part:

"I have been asked to speak tonight on the subject of reciprocity and the relation of the two great political parties to that question. Let me begin by saying that reciprocity is a practical question of bargain and agreement, of give and take and can be determined not by vague generalities but only by concrete instances as they arise. Every one is in favor of larger markets for our products. Every one is in favor of reciprocity or any other policy which will enlarge our foreign markets, provided that such reciprocity or other similar policy does not involve greater sacrifice than the proposed enlargement of the foreign market is worth. In other words I am personally in favor of reciprocity when it brings compensation to the United States for any concession we make and does not injure American labor, industry or agriculture. But because I favor reciprocity under these conditions I do not promise to support any scheme of legislation or any treaty that any one chooses to label reciprocity. I must reserve my absolute right to judge the merits of any scheme when it arises in accordance with what I believe to be the best interests of my country and my state. No responsible public man can, in my judgment, take honestly any other position than this.

"Real commercial reciprocity between nations involves of course concessions in duties on one side in return for concessions in duties on the other, and is possible only when tariffs exist. Under the Free Trade declaration of the Democrats in 1892 reciprocity is impossible. This year the Democratic party and their candidate demand a reduction of duties. How many other nations do you think would make concessions in duties in return for similar concessions on our part if a party came into power which was pledged to reduce all duties in any event? The question answers itself. No one would even treat with us under such conditions, for they would be sure to get the reduction by our legislation without giving anything in return. Either the democrats do not favor reciprocity or they do not favor a reduction of duties because the two together are impossible and incompatible. In a word, the party of Free Trade and tariff reduction is incapable of carrying out a reciprocity policy which is impossible except to a party of protection."

Mr. Lodge then discussed the Kansas treaties in detail giving his reasons for supporting nine of the eleven and his objections to the other two. Referring to the French treaty, after stating the list of articles upon which a reduction of tariff was made, he said:

"I ask you to consider that list. There is hardly any industry in Massachusetts which is full of the most varied and finer industries, both great and small, that escapes a reduction in its protecting duty of five to twenty per cent.

"All that the United States practically gained was an important reduction upon agricultural machinery, made chiefly in Chicago, and for that the jewelry makers of Attleboro the watchmakers of Waltham, the cotton spinners and the worsted mills, the optical instrument makers of Southbridge and a hundred other Massachusetts industries were to pay, and we of Massachusetts, of New England and the East got absolutely nothing while our great shoe and leather industries were expressly excluded from any hope of benefit. If Mr. Hoar and I had voted for that treaty we should have deserved the reprobation of the state for wanton sacrifice of its industries and its prosperity. I say to you frankly, I will not vote for such an arrangement and no Massachusetts Republican Senator ever would, for that is not our conception of guarding the interests of Massachusetts.

He then gave a careful resume of the Newfoundland negotiations showing that the removal of the duties on cured and salted fish would not only affect the fisheries of Gloucester but all its allied industries and that in return we only received the privilege of taking bait without a license, slight concessions on provisions and the placing of "Gas engines" on the free list. Continuing he said:

"What does the Newfoundland market amount to? There are 210,000 people in Newfoundland, according to the last census. In Massachusetts and Maine alone there are 100,000 directly dependent on the fisheries, without adding those who live by the allied industries, and they are consumers who give you an exclusive market. Of this Newfoundland population, 5,000 are engaged in the fisheries, 1,547 are farmers, 2,682 mechanics, 1,258 miners. How many farm implements or gas engines do you think we should sell to that population? And on the articles chiefly used by three-quarters of the population, who are engaged in the fisheries, we get no reduction. The total imports of Newfoundland in 1900 were seven millions and a half dollars from all countries. When you remember that the exports of domestic products from the United States in 1902 was one billion, three hundred million of dollars, the amount of the entire Newfoundland imports does not seem very imposing and our actual export to that island of two millions of dollars still less so. But I will give you a better comparison. The manufactured shipping value of Gloucester's products alone was six million dollars in 1901. If we should get the entire value of all the Newfoundland imports it would not much more than cover the value of the fisheries of Gloucester alone, and the value of the product of the fishermen of the United States is forty-six million dollars. We want to think carefully before we endanger an industry whose annual product is forty-six millions of dollars in seeking a market where we now sell only two million dollars and to which this treaty opens no additional door.

"There has been some discussion favoring free coal, free iron and free lumber from Canada. This is what we give to Canada but nothing is said as to what Canada is to give us in return. Without some concessions from Canada this demand is not reciprocity but limited free trade.

"I should be glad to vote for a reciprocity treaty with Canada or any other country which was beneficial to any of our business interests and not injurious to American industry, agriculture or labor. But there is no use in shutting our eyes to the practical difficulty which the history of these treaties discloses. I think we should consider very carefully whether the true way to improve our foreign markets is not by general legislation which will bring a general reciprocity and which shall bear equally on all parts of the United States, and if successful bring benefit to the whole country. What I mean is the establishment of a maximum and minimum rate. Let all nations that favor us or that treat us on an exact equality with every one else come in at the low rate, and those nations which discriminate in any degree against us come in at the highest rate. In that way we should get into all markets on an equality with other nations, which is the most important thing to achieve.

"Every Republican favors reciprocity consistent with protection principles, but it does not follow from this that any and every arrangement which any man or any group of men choose to call reciprocity is therefore to be supported and adopted. Each law, each treaty, each case must be decided on its own merits. I favor, as I have said, any reciprocal arrangement which gives mutual advantages to the United States and the country treated with, which does not injure our industries or our agriculture, and which assures to the United States due compensation for all it concedes. I favor reciprocity, but I do not favor bad bargains under the name of reciprocity or any other name. I repeat that I must decide each case as it arises, according to my best judgment as to the interests of my country and my state, and no man fit to be trusted with the high and responsible duties of a Senator can take any other position. So far as political parties are concerned there may be differences of opinion as to any specific case, but one thing is certain, the Democratic party for fifty years has done nothing in regard to reciprocity except abrogate the Blaine treaties. They never can do anything because they are in principle the party of free trade and tariff reduction, and without a tariff of a protective character reciprocity cannot exist.

Congressman Powers followed Senator Lodge with a witty and rambling speech, which was received with great applause and laughter. The singing of America brought the affair to a close.

At the Churches.

At the Immanuel Baptist church next Sunday morning the pastor, Rev. Frank B. Matthews, will preach on the topic "The Christian Principle of Universal Peace Among the Nations."

The annual business meeting of the Ladies Aid Society was held Wednesday afternoon at the Newton Methodist church. The monthly social followed with a supper and entertainment.

An important business meeting of the Red Bank Society will be held Saturday afternoon at the Second Congregational church, West Newton. The topic considered will be "Japan, its Country and People."

At Grace church, Newton, next Tuesday, the lesson Committee of the Episcopal church, made up of the representatives from the different dioceses in this country, will hold its first meeting in New England. Bishop Coleman of Delaware will preside and the all day session will be attended by some 50 clergymen and laymen.

At the First church, Newton Centre, last Friday evening the series of special services were continued. It was a fellowship service and addresses were made by Rev. Morgan Miller on "The Suburban Church," Rev. Ralph T. Flewelling on "The Church and the Community," Rev. E. T. Sullivan on "The Inspirational Church," and Dr. Everett D. Burr on "The Church of Christ in Newton Centre." On Sunday morning the pastor Rev. Edward McArthur Noyes preached an appropriate sermon and at the Sunday school rally at noon two addresses were made one by Hon. Albert L. Harwood on "The Sunday School in the Past," the other by Mr. Burton Payne Gray on "The Sunday School in the Future." The young people's service in the evening was conducted by the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor. The speaker was Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark, president of the United Society and his topic was "The Young People and the New Church."

The recently organized young people's society connected with Channing church, Newton, has chosen the following officers for the coming year: President, Walter E. Hills; vice president, Alfred H. Wing; secretary, Miss Buelah Bailey; treasurer, Otis L. Farley. The meetings will be held on Sunday afternoons in the church parlors beginning October 9th.

The regular monthly meeting of the Altar Guild of the Church of the Redeemer, Chestnut Hill, will be held in the parish house next Thursday morning at 10 o'clock.

Letter to Stanley Bros.

Newton.

Dear Sirs: Mr. President of a cotton-mill at Union, S. C. he don't want to see his name in print—had two offers of 500 gallons of paint: $1.30 and $1.25. Took the $1.25; and got skinned. He'd have got three-quarters skinned if he'd taken the other.

The $1.30 was full-gallon; the $1.25 was 18% short. The full-measure paint was adulterated 40%; the short-measure paint was adulterated 45%, besides benzine in the oil, don't know how much.

Devote lead-and-zinc wasn't sold in the town then. — It don't pay to monkey with paint. Devote costs less than any of 'em; not by the gallon, of course; by the house and year. That's how to reckon it. Go by the name.

Yours truly
F W Devoe & Co

erson is being started with the following ends in view. They desire first,
a place where any woman may bring anything that she can make, and it will be sold for her on commission;
second, a place where any woman may get done, anything she may want to have done and they will guarantee satisfaction. In a word, they are desirous of meeting the needs of every woman they can reach and with this end in view desire your hearty cooperation and good will.

FOR COUNCILLOR.

Candidacy of Mr. G. Fred Simpson Urged by Prominent Citizens.

To the Republican Voters of the Third Councillor District of Massachusetts:

We, the undersigned, members of the Committee selected for the purpose of urging the candidacy of Mr. G. Fred Simpson of Newton for the Councillor nomination in the Third District desire to bring to your attention the qualifications of Mr. Simpson for that office.For more than thirty years he has been a resident of the City of Newton, and a devoted and loyal member of the Republican Party all his life. He was born nearly sixty years ago in Sullivan in the State of Maine, and educated in the public schools of that place. While a young man he enlisted in the 20th Regiment of Maine Infantry, and served with credit during the term of enlistment, receiving an honorable discharge in 1863. Shortly after the War he came to Massachusetts and with his brother James organized the well known firm of Simpson Brothers, which has since been succeeded by the Simpson Brothers Corporation, and for more than thirty-five years has had a successful and honorable business career in this Commonwealth.We do not hesitate to say that he is a man of the highest character and integrity, of marked ability, sound judgment and of a gentle and dignified personality. He has all the qualities requisite for the performance of the duties of a member of the Governor's Council, and we feel confident that in that position he would perform the duties in such a manner as to reflect credit upon himself, upon the Third Councillor District, and upon the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.We therefore urge you to attend the Republican Caucuses and vote for the following delegates:—Albert S. Apsey.

Newton Single Tax Club.

Despite the rain a goodly number gathered at a special meeting of the club Monday evening at the residence of C. B. Fillebrown, 230 Bellevue street. Mr. Fillebrown president of the Club, introducing the speaker of the evening, Mr. John Z. White of Chicago, said:"Let no one think because the Newton Single Tax work was swallowed up in a larger Boston work that this Club is dead or sleeping."The people of Newton are alive to their new tax rate of $17.80 for 1904.
This Garden City of ours has the finest of streets, sewers, water, police and fire department and of them it is justly proud. If $17.80 appear to us a high rate of taxation one obvious way to reduce this rate is suggested for your consideration, namely, to build and equip no more streets until those already built are occupied. Present street accommodations are easily ample for twice the present number of buildings, without addition to the four hundred thousand or five hundred thousand dollars spent in 1903 upon their equipment and maintenance.
With twice as many houses would come twice as many people and twice as much land value as a basis of taxation. The tendency of this would be to halve the rate so far as street equipment is concerned, and induce a reduction of three to five dollars per thousand in the total rate."A moderate estimate for the ground rent of Newton is $1,000,000 per year of which $400,000, is now taken in taxation. The economic mistake which the City of Newton makes is in letting the six hundred thousand dollar balance of the product of its own taxes go into private pockets while the people are taxed upon their buildings and personal property a like amount of six hundred thousand dollars to make up the deficit caused by this miscarriage of public expenditures into a private instead of into a public fund."Mr. White's speech will be given in full next week.

CHAPMAN-HASTINGS.

A pretty home wedding took place at the residence of Mrs. Eliza Smith in Holyoke last Tuesday at 1 o'clock
when her granddaughter Miss Clarissa Smith Hastings was united in marriage to Mr. Robert Chapman Jr of Newtonville. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Reed, pastor of the Congregational church, assisted by Rev. Edward M. Chapman of St.
Johnsbury, Vt. a brother of the groom.
Miss Huston of Holyoke, a cousin of the bride was maid of honor and thebest man was Mr. Howard T. Chapman of Saybrook. The ushers were Messrs Henry Beveridge Patrick of Newtonville and David Brown of New York. A reception followed at which the bride and groom were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Smith and Mr.
and Mrs. Robert Chapman of Saybrook. After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Chapman will make their home on Webster street, West Newton.Wheelock and Shaw, 47 Winter St., Boston, Mass. are displaying a novelty in the shape of a Sachet Talcum Puff. It is the perfect toilet requisite.
Delightful after bathing or shaving.
Distributes the powder evenly and does not spill the powder over the dresses. It is handpainted kid or silk. Absolutely pure. The skin is kept soft and white.

MR. WELLS DEAD.

Mr. John Thomas Wells a resident of Newton since 1862 and a pioneer Boston business man died at his home on Franklin street Wednesday
after a long period of ill health. Mr.
Wells was born in the old family mansion on Salem street Boston in March 1812. The home was one of the oldest in Boston, having been built in 1680 and antedated the Old Corner Bookstore. Deceased was one of the founders and for many years a member of the crockery firm of Abram French and Co. He retired from active business life in 1886. He was a member of the Channing Unitarian Church. A son Mr. John Wells Jr., of Wellesley and two daughters the Misses Helen T. and Sarah B. Wells survive him. The funeral will be held Saturday afternoon from his late residence at 2 o'clock.

THE PRIMARIES.

All Parties Caucus Together Tuesday.

Newton Candidates Receive Unanimous Support.

Newton's first experience with joint primaries on Tuesday was fairly satisfactory, although a few changes would greatly improve the handling and counting of the vote. The Weeks-Bemis force brought out a good vote for the Republicans, the Democratic and Socialist vote being negligible. Captain Weeks swept the city for Congress, the Bemis vote proving less than expected. In Ward 3, the contest for state delegates was won by the anti-Whipple faction by a narrow margin. Representatives Warren and Lowell received a deserved unanimous renomination from the Republicans, their opponents being John M. Barry and Daniel O'Connell, Democrats and P. J. Powers Jr. and J. T. Thomason, Socialists.

At the Theatres

Coming Attractions

Tremont Theatre—It will be with genuine regret that playgoers learn that next week will bring about the close of the Boston engagement of the popular Ade-Luders opera, "The Sho-Gun." Judging from the size of audiences that have been flocking to the Tremont during the past five weeks this Henry W. Savage attraction could run on there indefinitely were it possible to change bookings made early in the season. A more emphatic hit than "The Sho-Gun" has not been known in Boston theatrics in many seasons, and time only seems to emphasize the great popularity of this artistic production. It has been drawing capacity audiences since the opening night, and for the closing performances the theatre is sure to be packed to the limit. Beginning next Monday there will be but eight more chances to see "The Sho-Gun."

Park Theatre—Charles Frohman's production of Augustus Thomas latest play "The Other Girl" which commenced a limited engagement Monday evening at the Park Theatre, has made one of the greatest laughing successes ever seen in Boston. In "The Other Girl," Mr. Thomas introduces to the stage, a new and thoroughly refreshing character, that of a physical culturist, whose use of the slang that goes with the pugilistic profession equals any of the efforts of George Ade. Merry from end to end, keeping the audience in a continual laughter from start to finish, this latest girl on the stage promises to endear herself in New England theatregoers as has no other, and

MISS NANCE O'NEIL,
At Tremont Theatre, Boston, Oct. 10.
One week only.

Keith's Theatre—Keith's vaudeville program for the week of Oct. 3 will be headed by Milton and Dolly Nobles, in a new comedy sketch. The novelty on the bill will be a new idea in the way of a song sheet, in which a colored chorus will be employed that is claimed to be the best yet heard in an act of this kind. The soloist will be Martha Pulley, one of the liveliest "real coon" shouters in the country. The season's most talked about specialty on the New York roof Gardens, "Pewitt, or the Mysterious Race," will be seen for the first time in Boston. At least a dozen other notable entertainers are to appear, and the bill will prove in every way as strong as those that have been attracting attention the past few months. Annie Irish, in "An Actress' Christmas Eve," is the underlined feature for the week of Oct. 10.

Scene from "THE OTHER GIRL," at the Park Theatre.

unquestionably the Park Theatre will be crowded during the run of this piece as it deserves to be.

Grand Opera House—"The Factory Girl" by Charles E. Blaney is the title of the play which will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House the coming week. It will be the first appearance of the play in this city. It is described as a powerful labor play of the comedy-drama type, abounding in great sensational scenes of a wholesome kind, charming bits of pathos, heart interest and delightful specialties, to say nothing of many original and extremely funny comedy scenes. It requires two special cars to carry the scenery and mechanical effects, among which is a complete electric plant and tons of intricate machinery. The usual matinees will be given on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Colonial Theatre—Messrs Klaw and Erlanger will present next Monday, Oct. 3, for a two weeks engagement at the Colonial theatre, Boston, their musical success "A Little of Everything." This musical skit, by John J. McNally, was constructed for laughing purposes only, and it fulfils its mission. Miss Fay Templeton and Peter F. Daily are at the head of the organization and are ably assisted by other well-known players. Messrs. Klaw and Erlanger have made an elaborate production for "A Little of Everything" the costumes are marvels of color effects, all minor details are cleverly handled and the production as a whole is equal to all demands. The regular Colonial Theatre prices will prevail.

At Chickering Hall the remarkable drama, "Beyond," is being presented nightly, with matinees Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. A large number of clergymen have examined the work, and have bestowed upon it the heartiest approval. It is attracting crowded houses in Boston, and no drama in years has excited such interest and discussion. "Beyond" is based upon a dream of the famous Edgar Allan Poe, who is the principal character in the play. Poe dreamed that he was murdered and that in No Man's Land his soul came upon the soul of his murderer. How forgiveness was necessary before he could join his affinity Lenore in the fields of Aiden is told in the drama with remarkable power and beauty. Poe's search for Lenore first in the Elysian Fields, and then in the First Supermundane Sphere, and his meeting with Aaron Burr, Tasso, the poetess Sappho, give opportunity for much exquisite imagery and strong dramatic incident. The drama is in four parts, the last showing the meeting of Poe and Lenore beyond the stars.

Street Railway Notes

The Boston and Worcester Trolley Air Line discontinued the regular fifteen minute schedule between Boston and Worcester last week. On pleasant Sundays, the Company will run fifteen minute time as in the past and at all times will run extra cars on heavy trips, so that the patrons of the road will be assured of good service and ample accommodations at any time. Traffic is heavy just now on account of the magnificent foliage on the through line, and the Company are ready with extra cars to accommodate the sightseers.

Coaches in France.

As regards the history of coaches in France, Henry IV. was assassinated in 1610. Soon after his death some engravings were published representing him being murdered in his carriage by Ravallac. It is from these that we get a fair idea of the coaches.

They are simply square boxes, measuring by scale six feet in length by three and a half feet in width, on four wheels of the same diameter, without any springs or straps and seating six persons in all—namely, two with their backs to the horses, two facing them and two more, one on each side of the two "boots" at the side. Each vehicle had a roof, resting on light columns, and curtains to draw or to let down.

This agrees well with the received accounts of the incident, according to one version of which Henry rode in an open carriage, and according to another that as soon as the fatal blow was delivered by the assassin the king's attendant who rode with him in the carriage drew the curtains, and, hiding the king from public view, assured the enraged people that he was only wounded.—Notes and Queries.

Cuban Women.

The Cuban women—and the men as well—are intensely affectionate. They say much in words, often more than their hearts feel. But they are very warm hearted. Every letter that I get from girl friends of six months' acquaintance is a love letter, full of passionate expressions of endearment. The Cuban women mature quickly, and a girl of fourteen in Cuba is as mature as a girl of seventeen here. Early marriages are the rule. The Cuban women are dainty, pretty and very like the French women, with many of the French ways and ideals. They care little for forming themselves into clubs for literary culture, and woman suffrage doesn't agitate them. They are vastly more interested in being clever housekeepers, good muscicians, good needlewomen, charming sweethearts, than in running the government.—Cor. Cincinnati Times-Star.

Farragut's Death.

Admiral Farragut's death was due to the selfishness of a woman. The admiral and his wife were coming from California, when a woman occupying a seat in front of them in the car opened a window. Admiral Farragut was ill, and the strong draft of wind which blew directly upon him chilled him. Mrs. Farragut asked the woman courteously if she would not kindly close the window, as it was annoying to her husband. The woman snapped out: "No, I won't close the window. I don't care if it does annoy him. I am not going to smother for him." Admiral Farragut thus caught a severe cold, which resulted in his death. A few days before the end came he said, "If I die, that woman will be held accountable."—Exchange Journal.

Easy to Keep Afloat.

If every person knew that it is impossible to sink if one keeps his arms under water and moves his legs as if he were going upstairs, and that one may keep this motion up for hours before fatigue ends it, there would be few casualties. Such is the fact. Except where cramp renders motion impossible, the man who gets an involuntary ducking has small chance of drowning. He can generally keep afloat until rescuers appear. The people who drown are those who frantically wave their arms out of water and lose their self possession.—Chicago Journal.

The Castle in Chess.

The castle in chess owes its shape and name to a misunderstanding of its old Italian name, "rocca," as if it were "rocca" a castle or fortress. The words rocca, rook and roc (French) come from rokk, the old Persian name of the piece, which was in the shape of an elephant. Curiously enough, the elephant carried a little castle on his back, and the position of the piece on the board seemed suitable for a castle.

By Jupiter, Take This.

The letter "R" at the head of all prescriptions is derived from the Latin word recipe, the imperative meaning "take." The little dart over the tail of the "R" is the symbol of Jove, or the Latin god Jupiter, and invests the writer with his authority—by the power of Jupiter. Therefore the sign properly reads, "By Jupiter, take this."

Yourself.

Man's greatest enemy is himself. If every man in the world should be as careful of deserving an honest opinion of himself as he is of getting the good opinion of others there would be a vast difference in the standing of the majority of mankind.—Lynn News.

On Duty.

"Hello!" cried the policeman. "Reading a paper, eh? I thought you were a blind man!" "So I am during business hours," the blind man replied, "but I'm off duty now."—Philadelphia Press.

Might Be, but Not Wholly.

"Do you consider him a man who can be trusted?" "Well," replied the Boston parist, "I suppose he can be trusted, but there would be considerable risk attached to the proceeding."

The Book That Held Him.

"Yes, I picked up this book last night, and I never budged out of my chair until 4 o'clock this morning." "Goodness! Was it that interesting?" "No; but I didn't wake up until that time."

Willing to Listen.

Tess—She was boasting that she is a very good listener. Jess—Yes. She's what you might call a fluent listener. She loves to hear herself talk.—Exchange.
